NEVER TOO LATE TO MEND, by the late Charles Reade, Esq., was received on Monday evening by a crowded house of admiring patrons and pronounced (deservedly so) as the BEST DRAMATIC PRODUCTION OF THE SEASON. Each scene was applauded to the echo, and the artistes repeatedly called before the curtain to bow their acknowledgments.

EVERY EVENING, at 7.45.
NEVER TOO LATE TO MEND.
Never Too Late to Mend. Never Too Late to Mend.
Never Too Late to Mend. Never Too Late to Mend.

The Model Prison—"Abandon hope all ye who enter here." "The new system." Solitude. Silence and starvation represented by the gaoler. Two old systems. The Law and the Gospel represented by the chaplain. Despair and death of the boy Josepha under the new system. Reformation of Tom Robinson under the old system. Despair is the soul's worst enemy. "My last word to you in this world is, 'It's Never Too Late to Mend.'"

The representation of the Model Prison Scene is a most thrilling and heart-rending spectacle, and thoroughly true to nature, depicted in a realistic manner by all engaged.

ALFRED DAMPIER, B. N. JONES, and the Royal Dramatic Combination.
ENTIRELY NEW SCENERY
has been painted expressly by Messrs. GEORGE GORDON and JOHN HENNINGS,
The realistic farm life and Australian scenic effects being a novel and striking character.
Act 1.—OLD ENGLAND.
Act 2.—THE MODEL PRISON.
Act 3.—THE ANTIPODES.
Act 4.—AUSTRALIA.
Act 5.—HOME AGAIN AT GROVE FARM.
"IT IS NEVER TOO LATE TO MEND."

CONTINENTAL GOSSIP.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT "STELLA.")

PARIS, Oct. 31.

This gay capital is preparing to celebrate, with the general observance which makes the first days of November a period apart, the return of the two great fêtes of All Saints and All Souls, otherwise styled "The Day of the Dead." The shops are full of the tokens that will be carried in profusion to the cemeteries of Paris and the adjoining villages; wreaths of flowers, artificial or real, crowns, crosses, rings, &c., of black and white beads strung on wire, hoops of "everlastings," white, purple, yellow, brown, green, as the ingenuity of the dyer has determined. Pots of live flowers, bouquets, in which chrysanthemums and dahlias will hold a prominent place, are accumulated in great quantities both in the markets and in the neighbourhood of the various graveyards; and all ordinary business will be, to a great extent, deferred, and replaced by visits to the graves of relatives and friends. The French people, in so many ways somewhat light of fancy and action, are remarkably and touchingly faithful to, and earnest in, their remembrance of those who have gone back into the other life before them.

And not only those who still believe in the existence of the soul and of a new life beyond the grave, but even those who believe in neither, are thus faithful to the remembrance of the friends whom they have lost. A short time since an English lady, the pioneer of the movement which opened the medical profession to her sex, and the foundress of the Society for the Advancement of Moral Purity, which is quietly inaugurating a much-needed reform across the Channel, came to this city to urge the formation of a similar association, for the spread of truer physiological ideas on the subject of personal morality. So much interest was manifested on the subject that the friends who had invited the lady M.D. to come over and state the grounds of her action to a knot of Parisian reformers, found themselves obliged to enlarge their arrangements for receiving her, and instead of a mere "drawing-room meeting," she found that a hall had been secured for the evening, and that not only was this hall filled, but that numbers of people who applied for admittance had to be turned away for want of room. Having read the lecture which she had prepared for the occasion, she intimated that she would like to have an expression of opinion upon the arguments which she had brought forward. Whereupon a gentleman rose to his feet, and remarked, in the name of the audience:—"Madame has stated the matter, from her point of view, with great clearness and eloquence; but she grounds her views of morality on the basis of God and of the immortality of the soul. I beg to point out to her that we utterly reject the belief in either the one or the other. We have ceased to believe in the existence either of God or of the soul. I have, therefore, to beg that she will have the goodness to state the physiological laws which lie at the root of the subject of her lecture, and any facts in regard to this subject which she may be able to bring forward from her professional experience." To this request, which seemed to embody the sentiment of the majority of those present, the lady lecturer replied that, in view of the wide discrepance between her own view of truth and duty and those implied in the remarks just made, she would request all present to propose to her any questions that might occur to them in reference to the subject before them, assuring them that she would have much pleasure in answering them to the utmost of her power. This was accordingly done, and the evening passed in the propounding and answering of a great number of questions, to the great satisfaction of a highly intelligent audience, who at the close of this animated conversation passed a vote of thanks to their visitor. But all those who thus declared their disbelief either in God or in the existence of soul, will flock to the cemeteries to-morrow, carrying their tokens of affectionate or friendly remembrance, to lay on the graves that, in their desolate view of the Universe and of human life, have melted into the hopelessness of annihilation.

The weather prophets are predicting an unusually rigorous winter, and the presence of wolves, in unusual numbers, in the regions of France which they honour with their presence, is considered as giving weight to this prediction. Dogs, sheep, and lambs have already been devoured by these ravenous beasts in considerable numbers, although the returns of the Agricultural Department give 1508 as the number killed during the past year, at a cost to the State of 108,720 francs in fees paid for the heads of these terrible animals, which, happily, do not often attack human beings, only nine such instances (nine too many) being mentioned in the report.

Frosts are already reported in the Eastern region of France, and snow has already covered the hilly ones with their winter mantle. Sportsmen are making the most of the privileges of the season, and hunts on a large scale are being organised at the chateaux of noted Nimrods, while the possessors of a "hunting-permit" are ramping over the fields on every hand. But comparatively few sportsmen could rival the achievements of the Emperor Francis Joseph, whose doings in the hunting line amount to 48,788 head of game brought down by his Imperial and royal gun in the forty years included between 1844 and 1884, as appears from the official list of the same just published, viz.,—pheasants, 14,178; partridges, 8270; hares, 6488; rabbits, 4416; chamois, 1570; wild duck, 1404; snipe, 1270; snipe, 855; stags, 897; does, 922; woodcock, 582; fawns, 377; quails, 286; fallow deer, 1; foxes, 197; grouse, 54; wild fowl, 6; 1 boar; wolves, 2 lynx, &c.; and 1287 birds of prey of various species.

The will of the late Duke of Brunswick has created a ferment among the subjects of the departed Prince. Of the 375 millions of francs left by him, mainly to the Duke of Cumberland, not a farthing is left to the town or state from which he derives his title and his wealth, not a penny to any hospital, school, or any other benevolent, scientific, or useful institution. The various relatives of the Duke, as also his late subjects, are accordingly preparing to attack the will of the late ungrateful potentate of the duchy which Germany forbids the Duke of Cumberland to take possession of, and which the Duke of Cambridge invited to accept the little state, has hastened to renounce, wisely preferring to retain his brilliant and commanding position at the head of the British army.

The Comte de Chambord, great nephew of the deceased Duke, and grandson of that Duke's dethroned brother, and his mother, went to the ducal funeral in the hope of finding that he had been remembered in the ducal testament; but nothing has been left to him, and he has taken the funeral journey for nothing. The conduct of the dethroned Duke toward his deceased brother's family, and the Countess de Chambord in particular, has been hard-hearted in the extreme; and the conduct of his ducal relative, since his mother's death, has been equally so.

The scandalous suit which has grown out of the peculations of a committee of self-appointed philanthropists to get up the great fete at the Tuileries (in aid of the victims of the Commune), has brought to light the most shameless misappropriation of more than half the money intended for the victims. Among the most shameless of these depredators M. Jovis, the aeronaut, whose narrow escape from being, in the Mediterranean, some four years ago (his balloon fell into the sea), sent a thrill of horror through Europe. This gentleman, having volunteered to take charge of the balloon ascents forming the leading feature of the programme, began by his brougham by the month. He next paid an old debt of 1500 francs out of the fund, repaired three balloons in the same way, at an enormous cost, distributed money with a free hand to all of his friends, charged himself and them out in new clothes, and billed for his meals and for a gay supper given at Meudon, besides charging his hotel bill and; altogether his nibblings into the latter amount to 15,000 francs. The other members of the committee emulated his doings.

The various batteries that have been permitted to draw enormous sums from the public pocket under the pretence of aid of various artistic or charitable objects, coming in for examination and blame, as it is found that of the great number of millions thus extracted the general greed, considerably more than the half has remained in the hands of the getters-up of the affairs. The disgraceful facts now being brought to light concerning these abuses will probably lead to the proper authorities of the Government to grant the required authority for getting them up.

Not that the present Government, which has doubled the expenditure of the Second Empire, can boast of any scrupulosity in regard to money matters. The Republicans themselves are beginning to call attention to the extraordinary increase in the staff of the Civil Service under the Third Republic. Since 1876 alone there have been created in the various Ministries 10 new positions of directors, 19 sub-directors, 51 chief clerks, and 71 second clerks, thus distributed: Fine Arts Departments, 30 chiefs for a staff of 70 clerks; Worship, 20 chiefs for 81 clerks; Direct Taxes, 11 chiefs for 19 clerks; Registration, 36 chiefs for 42 clerks; Manufactures, 15 chiefs for 22 clerks. And while increasing enormously the fat salaries of the upper classes of people in the ranks of the Government, the pinching pay of the lower classes of employees, of the men who really do the work in the various bureaux, is being constantly cut down with the most unjust and unfeeling harshness.

France, as is well-known, is very rich, thanks, mainly, to the thrift and even miserliness of the great mass of her population. Twenty years ago M. Wolowski estimated this wealth at 178 milliards of francs (seven billions sterling). Since then, various economists—M. de Mony, the Duke d'Ayen, M. Vacher, Professor Ameline, M. de Folleville—have placed the amount at 200, 160, 260, 220, and 240 milliards. The latter statistician, by dint of patient investigation, has succeeded in ascertaining, as nearly as possible, the amount of capital hereditarily transmissible in each of the Departments of France. According to him, the total aggregates from 240 to 250 milliards of francs. The men now at the head of affairs seem determined to get as much as possible of this total out of the pockets of the public and into their own.

The admirers of that brilliant though wayward genius, Sarah Bernhardt, will learn with regret that she is dangerously ill, from the effects of an attempt at suicide, made with a view to escape from her pecuniary entanglements. Victorien Sardou is looking out for an actress to take the part of Theodora in his forthcoming drama, the title part of which was written expressly for her. It will not be easy to find this substitute.

THE ADVANCE OF THE RABBITS.

(BY OUR OWN REPORTER.)

The rabbits are now on both sides of the river Darling, within a hundred miles of Bourke, and unless some most drastic means are taken to effectually shut them out from the north-western lands of the colony, when the drought breaks up and the grass begins to spring again the pastoralists there will find themselves threatened with a new trouble as fatal to their interests as over a rainless season can be. Only last week at Bourke a meeting of runholders was held to consider this very question, and though no definite action was decided upon, the erection of a rabbit-proof fence was generally considered to be the only way of thoroughly saving themselves from the plague that is ascending the river. Curran Talpa, on the north bank of the Middle Darling, is about the farthest station the rabbits have reached yet, and there they occur only in such a mild form that they can be kept down at present, but at great expense. On the next run further down, Mara, they are very thick, and are increasing on the adjoining station of Burkumbe. For some considerable time the river proved a great check to the pests; but when it got low they easily crossed from sandbank to sandbank, and on logs, till now they have come up on the south side from Wilcannia way to within 95 miles of where they have reached to on the other bank. It is about two years since any rabbits were first observed on Curran Talpa, and then they were on the river alone; but now they are coming in from the back, travelling from the south-west to the north-east, and stretching over a face of country at least 50 miles wide. All the red ridges about Byerock are honeycombed with surface holes, so as to afford beautiful accommodation for the rabbits, from which it will be impossible to drive them out should they ever get that far to the east; and the menace the nature of that part of the country is to the lands beyond, is one too imminent to be lightly overlooked. Mr. M. H. Seale, manager of Curran Talpa, has had a peculiar experience of dealing with the rabbits and the working of the Rabbit Act, so that his statement in regard to the pest is very interesting, and may be considered as true in regard to a dozen other stations placed in a similar position to that under his care. He says: "With us the rabbits are only coming on. They have been on our run for two years, but only very thinly. They are spreading, however, and we have been under a very heavy expense in trying to keep them down. From the commencement of next year, under the new regulations, all rabbits destroyed will have to be paid for at the rate of 6d. a skin; but under the old rules £1 wages and 10s. a week for rations were allowed each man engaged in destroying the pest, whether any were killed or not. We found we could not destroy the rabbits by working this way; therefore, we gave in addition a bonus of 2s. 6d. a skin. We found this inducement the only way to get rid of the rabbits. Our average of catching was three rabbits per man a week, so that the process was extremely costly. And the new regulations will not relieve us in any way. They are right enough for the country lower down the Darling, about Tarcoola, Menindie, and Wentworth, where the rabbits are in thousands, because good wages can be earned there at 6d. a skin; but where the rabbits are only few—as with us at present the burden of destroying them will remain a heavy tax upon us. I can mention 18 stations in the same condition as Curran Talpa, and the greatest number of rabbits got on any one of these in one month was 50, and there eight men were employed working hard. The general mode adopted for catching is by trapping. We have tried poison, and failed. Our country is holey, and carbon cannot be used, as the rabbits can escape by some of the many outlets which it is impracticable to stuff up absolutely. They never touch poisoned oats. We think we can keep them down—not exterminate them, mind—if we only get sufficient encouragement, but at present the tax is altogether too great on the owner of the runs. With this new burden added to all the rest, a run would be almost worthless as a profitable investment. We have lost one-fourth of our sheep and nearly one-third of our horses this dry season; but then we sold our cattle off last season, and so had some maiden country to remove our stock to when the drought came. The following figures will give some idea of the expense to which we have been put under the old regulations in order to keep down the rabbits so far. From July 7 to December 31, 1883, five men killed 31 rabbits, at a cost of £102 13s., or more than £3 3s. each. On a small block adjoining Curran Talpa, from January 1 to March 31, 1884, one man killed nine rabbits for £26 8s 4d, the bonus then being 2s. a skin. From April 12 to May 17 he cost £7 2s. 10d., without catching a rabbit. We then considered the place clean, and knocked the man off. Now the pest is springing up again, and we are sending men out there once more. On Curran Talpa, from January 1 to March 31, 1884, four men killed 91 rabbits, at a cost of £105 2s. 7d., and from April 1 to June 30 they destroyed 46 for £56 12s. 1d., the wages given then being 15s. a week besides rations, with a 5s. bonus for each skin. While we were paying only 15s. a week, the Government allowed a bonus of 3d. a skin, which was discontinued when we paid full wages. From July 1 to September 30 our expenses were £72 10s. 6d. for about the same average of rabbits destroyed. We were keeping them down well so far; but the new regulations will upset everything by making the process so costly." Mr. D. Brown, manager of Kallara station, which is situated on the opposite side of the Darling to Curran Talpa, and, like it, just touched by the rabbits, and Mr. Seale had a long conversation on the subject of the pest with the Minister of Mines, Hon. J. P. Abbott, after the recent Ministerial banquet at Bourke, when they put forward their position in the van of the advancing rabbits with urgent argument. Mr. Abbott pointed out at once the difficulty of making a law for one place and another law for elsewhere on the same subject; but the deputation replied with the totally different circumstances of the different localities affected, as already referred to in Mr. Seale's statement on the question. It was finally arranged that the whole subject should be put before the Minister in writing, who then promised to consider it most carefully. Of course, in asking for more encouragement in their work of clearing off rabbits, the runholders of the Middle Darling simply mean more Government assistance in some shape or another, directly or indirectly; and in view of this Mr. Abbott reminded the gentlemen who broached the question to him, that it would be necessary to guard against any price offered in this colony for rabbit-skins being sufficient inducement for importations of large quantities which never grew on the backs of the New South Wales born "bunny."

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

"Rambles on the Golden Coast of the South Island of New Zealand, by R. C. Reid, Hokitika, N.Z. Reid and Co., printers and publishers, West Coast Times Office, 1884." The subject of this new work, is, as its title indicates, a narrative of travel and incident in the gold country along the coast of the South Island of New Zealand. Mr. Reid has dealt generously with his readers, and in giving them an interesting valuable sketch of the birth and life of the mining industry in that locality, he has surrounded the subject with many references to the magnificent scenery of the country traversed, and to many of the experiences which fall to the lot of an inquiring traveller. The writer gives evidence of an intimate knowledge of the various settlements, and of their growth and circumstances. His description of the numerous mining districts forms what may yet be regarded as an excellent history of them up to their present stage; while the record of the journey itself is well worthy of the attention of tourists or other travellers. The book contains about 30 full-page illustrations of scenery, ferns, and remarkable fish. It forms a large volume of over 170 pages, printed in large type, and is enclosed in an elegantly-finished binding, such as would entitle it to a place among the most ornamental of table books."

"Boodgery Yabber, by Boodgery Yaws. Sydney: John Woods and Co., Limited, 13, Bridge-street. 1884." Under a somewhat mysterious heading, the writer of

CARLYLE IN LONDON.*

I.

Goethe said, and Carlyle quoted the saying, that on the lives of remarkable men ink and paper should least be spared. Mr. Froude evidently believes in that saying, and adds two more bulky volumes to the already considerable library of the personal history of Mr. Carlyle. It cannot be said that these volumes are unwelcome, or in any sense de trop. The interest in Carlyle is as fresh now as on the day of his death, and has acquired a new zest by the points raised in the "Letters and Memorials" of Mrs. Carlyle. By that clever and surprising, in some respects distressing volume, a charge was raised if not formulated against Carlyle, which it is expected will in some degree be answered in this volume. It may be said that this somewhat vague charge is satisfactorily met and explained, though to answer, the biographer no more condescends than did the man, hero or martyr, through the days and the troubles of his life. Whatever answer there may be to the charges of the "Letters and Memorials" is rather in the way of a judicial summing up of the whole case than of a speech in reply; and indeed, however great a hold it may have taken upon the public attention, it is but a trivial and insignificant portion of the book. The more we understand of it, the more are we disposed to regret that it was ever made public. It can but irritate persons of judgment and honest desire to get at the facts of the man's life, while to minds weak and envious it finds an easy way for something approaching blasphemy. It does not, however, intrude in the early portion of the first of these volumes. There was no rift in the lute of domestic accord then, or the voice of genius and prophecy would most assuredly have been hushed for ever.

A.D. 1834, ætat 39, is the beginning of the life in London. And what a life! £200 as a capital, consciousness of supreme genius as a stimulant or irritant, a bilious constitution, and a year of laborious disappointment, with apprehension of want and distress in a near future, and no assurance whatever of acceptance from the public of anything that might be produced and offered. "Sartor Resartus" had already been published, so that it was no unknown litterateur who knocked at publishers' and editors' doors; but it was that absolutely unique and unhappy creature, a comparatively young writer with an independence equal to his self-consciousness; one who would follow no party, submit to no discipline, adopt no style, who had a message to deliver, and would deliver it in his own way or smother it in his own stuff. There were abundant openings for him if he would adapt himself to them, even before John Sterling procured him the perfectly useless invitation to write for the Times; but they did not fit, and he would neither pad nor trim to suit their dimensions. Hence he was poor, desperately poor; and nothing but the fixed desire, or it might be said the compelling necessity, to deliver himself of the French Revolution, prevented him from abandoning literature, and turning his hand to whatever occupation fate might provide. Fate kept him to his proper work. Had it been possible he would have looked back from the plough to which nature had set his hand upon the burning of the manuscript; but mourn and fret and fume as he might, he could not turn. A voice, distinct and imperative as that which came to John in Patmos, was with him, saying, "Write, write;" and thus with soul and body-anguish, labour unspeakable, varying success, and long-delayed recognition, as is fully set down and described in the nine hundred odd pages of these volumes, write he did, until the whole world listened and very slowly began to learn. We find little but depression and labour in the earlier chapters, an occasional meeting with some notability of the time, and, as a natural consequence, a bold and graphic portrait. Southey appears thus:—

"Southey, who received me kindly. A lean, grey, whitehaaded man of dusky complexion, unexpectedly tall when he rises and still leaner then—the shall-west chin, prominent snubbed Roman nose, small carelined brow, huge bush of white grey hair on high crown and projecting on all sides, the most vehement pair of faint hazel eyes I have ever seen—a well-read, honest, limited (strait-laced even), kindly-hearted, most irritable man."

And a little later Wordsworth, of whom—

"The old man has a fine shrewdness and naturelness in his expression of face, a long Cumberland figure; one finds also a kind of sincerity in his speech. But for prolixity, thinness, endless dilution, it excels all the other speech I heard from mortals. A genuine man, which is much, but also essentially a small genuine man. Nothing perhaps is sadder (of the glad kind) than the unbounded laudation of such a man, sad proof of the rarity of such. I fancy, however, he has fallen into the garrulity of age, and is not what he was; also that his environment and rural prophethood has hurt him much. He seems impatient that even Shakespeare should be admired. 'So much out of my own pocket.' The shake of hand he gives you is feckless, egotistical. I rather fancy he loves nothing in the world so much as one could wish. When I compare that man with a great man, alas! he is dwindling into a contemptibility. Jean Paul, for example (neither was he great), could have worn him in a finger-ring.' And again: Have seen Wordsworth, an old, very loquacious—indeed, quite prosing man, with a tint of naturalness, of sincere insight, nevertheless. He has been much spoiled; king of his company, unrecognised, and then adulated. Worth little now. A genuine kind of man, but intrinsically and extrinsically a small one, let them sing or say what they will."

Nor is it on record that he altered these opinions, or grew to regard them as conclusions drawn with bitterness because in a bitter time. He no more changed his views of Wordsworth than of Basil Montagu. Basil Montagu offered him a clerkship and £200 per annum, which drew from him the wish that "Montagudom generally would keep its own side of the pavement," and not suppose that Polar bears could be so reduced as to be safely trusted with the tending of rabbits. It was the ignorance rather than the impertinence of the man he resented. Of course he ought to have despised both, or, rather, with a true worldly wisdom to have accepted the £200 per annum, and have added thereto in ordinary and easy ways. He offended and possibly instructed Montagu and finished the French Revolution. It is unnecessary to follow M. Froude in his criticism or review of the great work which lifted Carlyle to fame and the lecture platform; but it is curious and instructive, and in a measure disappointing, to see how his mind formed, by the study of this greatest of all modern events, turned by-and-bye to the contemplation of the promise of a revolution in England. That, however, was not till much more education of time and circumstances had been endured.

The lectures, with their results, have been fully enough described before, and little is added here beyond an amplified account of Carlyle's disgust with the whole business. He could not get his audience into sympathy with those things he desired to say to them. It was "as if one should attempt to sing through a fleece." Yet for a year or two they secured him against poverty, and, perhaps, did more than has been estimated in advertising his books, all of which, from the time of the publishing of the Revolution, began to grow in the public esteem. Sartor even was talked about once more, and not with the wholesale condemnation and ridicule which had greeted his first appearance; and society opened its gates; people were eager to talk with the man who had talked so to their innermost souls from the platform, while those who had themselves either thought or wrought came seeking and acknowledging. Amongst others, who but the young Count D'Orsay, Phœbus Apollo of dandyism,—

"Nevertheless, we did amazingly well, the Count and I. He is a tall fellow of 6 feet 3, built like a tower, with floods of dark auburn hair, with a beauty, with an adornment unsurpassable on this planet: withal a rather substantial fellow at bottom, by no means without insight, without fun, and a sort of rough sarcasm rather striking out of such a porcelain figure. He said, looking at Shelley's bust, in his French accent, 'Ah, it is one of those faces who weesh to swallow their chin.'"

Then at a dinner, at the Stanleys' in Dover-street, Lord Holland, Lord Normanby, Morpeth, Lansdowne, French, Guizot, the Queen of beauty, &c.,—

"Nay, Pickwick, too, was of the same dinner party, though they do not seem to hood him over-much. He is a fine little fellow—Boz, I think. Clear, blue, intelligent eyes, eyebrows that he arches amazingly, large protrusive rather loose mouth, a face of most extreme mobility, which he shuttles about—eyebrows, eyes, mouth, and all—in a very singular manner while speaking. Surmount this with a loose coil of common-coloured hair, and set it on a small compact figure, very small, and dressed à la D'Orsay rather than well—this is Pickwick. For the rest a quiet, shrewd-looking, little fellow, who seems to guess pretty well what he is and what others are."

And by-and-bye Tennyson comes:—

"One evening, when he came home from his walk, he found Tennyson sitting with Mrs. Carlyle in the garden, smoking comfortably. He admired and almost loved Tennyson. He says:—A fine, large-featured, dim-eyed, bronze-coloured, shaggy headed man is Alfred; dusty, smoky, free and easy, who swims outwardly and inwardly with great composure in an inarticulate element of tranquil chaos and tobacco smoke. Great now and then when he does emerge—a most restful, brotherly, solid-hearted man."

Macaulay he could never endure:—

"At bottom, this Macaulay is but a poor creature with his dictionary literature and erudition, his saloon arrogance. He has no vision in him. He will neither see nor do any great thing, but be a poor Holland House unbeliever, with spectacles instead of eyes, to the end of him."

This, though he once went so far as to express some hope of amendment, was never seriously modified. Amongst other visitors came a young Boston lady described as a "diseased rosebud."

Puseyism at this time came demanding his attention, a knocking at the general door of the world:—

"Did you (he wrote to Sterling) in the course of your historical inquiries, ever fall in with any phenomenon adequately comparable to Puseyism? The Church of England stood long upon her tithes and her decencies; but now she takes to shouting in the market-place, 'My tithes are nothing, my decencies are nothing, I am either miraculous celestial or else nothing.' It is to me the fatallest symptom of speedy change she ever exhibited. What an alternative! Men will soon see whether you are miraculous celestial or not. Were a pair of breeches ever known to beget a son?"

His great work when the lectures had been at least temporarily abandoned, and publisher's honesty meeting public appreciation began to put comfortable sums in his pocket, was Cromwell. Mill asked him to write for his review an article on Cromwell. Mill's editor, however, determined to do the Cromwell himself, and so the prophet after venting spleen resolved to make of Cromwell a book. We know what a book he made. It is probable that no man living or dead ever received such service from another as did Cromwell from Carlyle. He did really and truly recover the man, and drag, or rather build him up, stone by stone, solid, magnificent erect, until he stood complete as comprehensible, a monarch to rule the thought and claim the admiration of all the ages. The work of that building, as here described, will probably astonish ordinary bookmakers as bookreaders. It was thought about in the year '44. It was begun in '45. The first edition was completed in '50. And through that time how he racked his own soul for ideas, how he ransacked the libraries of Britain for information, how he roamed hither and thither to the birthplace, the living, ruling, fighting places of the man: how frequently he found himself heaped up with information, built about with ideas as with books, and yet destitute of the one idea he required! "Cromwell has grown to be a ghost,' he said, "and will never take body again." "His time is a Golgotha of skulls." Nevertheless, the ghost was at last made to walk, and so strongly that he will move to and fro amongst the live ghosts of the world for ever.

To make matters more troublesome, while the tempest of Cromwell was tossing in his soul, the Chartist difficulty began to take shape in England, the carbonari to rock to and fro all the States of Europe; and one and another came to him as to a prophet saying, "What shall we do to be saved?" The Liberal, the Radical world had so misjudged him as to suppose that he had any other word but—"Do your duty." "Revolution," "Grand nation," "Rights of man." He hated them worse than corn laws and grand seignors, and so came "Past and Present," breaking the thread of the "Cromwell."

In 1848 Lady Harriet Baring appeared, though happily the Gloriana business did not begin till a year later. Nothing but pity can be felt for the poor victims of the innocent but ill-advised attentions to this brilliant lady. There was no harm, only folly in it. Carlyle could not understand that woman's antipathy is not to be argued down, and did not perceive that antipathy rooted in the very being of his wife. Had Lady Harriet been a picture, a statue, a memory a thousand years old, the "bewildered goody" would have worshipped and admired with him; but being feminine and present and imperative, the notion of usurpation crept in, and the passion never lacking in "goody's" composition blazed out. There were scenes, estrangement, and instead of any effort to win back, if indeed anything had been lost, strong and passionate protest. Mrs. Carlyle is sketched in various paragraphs through the book as a woman, not all abnegation, however kind and true. Here is a picture:—

"Her features were not regular; but I thought I had never seen a more interesting-looking woman. Her hair was raven black, her eyes dark, soft, sad, with dangerous light in them. Carlyle's look was rich, full, scornful; here delicately mocking."

And again:—

"She on her part, no doubt, had much to put up with. It was not easy to live with a husband subject to strange fits of passion and depression; often as unreasonable as a child, and with a Titanesque power of making mountains out of molehills. But she might have seen more clearly then she did, in these deliberate expressions of his feeling, the soundness of his judgment, and the genuine simple truth and loyalty of his heart. Let those married pairs who never know a quarrel, whose days run on unruffled by a breeze, be grateful that their lot has been cast in pleasant circumstances, for otherwise their experience will have been different. Let them be grateful that they are not persons of 'genius' or blessed or cursed with sarcastic tongues. The disorder which had driven Mrs. Carlyle to Scotland was mental as well as bodily. The best remedy for her lay, after all, at home; and she came back, as she said, after two months' absence 'a sadder and a wiser woman.'"

* * * * * * * * * *

"Charming, witty, brilliant, affectionately playful as she naturally was, she had 'a hot temper,' as Carlyle had said, and a tongue, when she was angry, like a cat's, which would take the skin off at a touch."

And as to style, the following may be taken:—

"Mrs. Carlyle described to us, some years after, in her husband's presence, his setting out on this expedition; she drew him in her finest style of mockery—his cloak, his knapsack, his broad-brimmed hat, his preparation of pipes, &c.—comparing him to Dr. Syntax. He laughed as loud as any of us: it was impossible not to laugh; but it struck me, even then, that the wit, however brilliant, was rather unfender."

It must always be remembered, too, that Carlyle sought by all the persuasive arts he knew to induce his wife to follow him into the fascination of their newly-discovered star. There was never the suspicion of an intrigue, and unless, as was indeed too often the case, illness, sheer physical incapacity, prevented her, she might at any time, instead of enduring doleful dumps and penning fearful lamentations, have shared with her husband the society he desired, and she was fitted to adorn.

There is something almost ridiculously unfortunate in the full and impartial chronicle of this time. Here is an extract from a letter:—

"No word from you yet; not the scrape of a pen this morning either. It is not right, my poor dear Jeannie! it is not just nor according to fact; and it deeply distresses and disturbs me, who had no need of disturbance or distress otherwise, if all were well known to thee. But it is best that I suffer it with little commentary. To thee, also, I will believe it is no luxury. I said to myself last night, while tossing and tumbling amid thousandfold annoyances, outward and inward, 'It is not fair all this—really it is not fair.' I wanted to do none any injury. My one wish and aim was to pass among them without hurting any, doing good to some if I could. My own lot has been but emptiness, and they all cry: 'See, thou hast taken something of mine!' The jackass brayed, or the horse neighed, or some of the children coughed, and roused me from these unprofitable reflections. Silence is better than most speech in the case. This, however, I will say and repeat: 'The annals of insanity contain nothing madder than "jealousy" directed against such a journey as I have before me to-day.' Believed or not, that is verily a fact. To the deepest bottom of my heart that I can sound, I find far other feelings, far other humours and thoughts at present than belong to 'jealousy' on your part. Alas! alas! I must, on the whole, allow the infernal deities to go their full swing: but madness shall not conquer, if all my saints can hinder it. Oh, my Jeannie! my own true Jeannie! bravest little life companion, hitherto, into what courses are we tending? God assist us both, and keep us free from frightful Niagaras and temptations of Satan. I am, indeed, very miserable. My mother asks:—'No word from Jane yet?' And, in spite of her astonishment, I am obliged to answer, 'None.'"

It should be noted, however, that this letter was written just as he was on the point of starting to join a party of friends, amongst whom was Lady Harriet. Mrs. Carlyle wrote to Joseph Mazzini, and the replies of that good man, patriot, hero, carbonari, rebel, are as true and tender and wise epistles as could have proceeded from any pastor or father of the church. It is pleasant to read them, here, remembering the hard-lined vitriol sketches, albeit scratched with a golden pen recently given to us in another volume of memoirs. These letters helped her much,—

"She, like a sensible woman, crushed down her own dissatisfaction. The intimacy was to go on upon whatever terms Carlyle pleased, and she resigned herself to take a part in it, since there was no reasonable cause to be alleged for cessation or interruption. But the wound fretted inwardly and would not heal. She and her husband had quarrelled often enough before—they had quarrelled and made it up again, for they had both hot tempers and sharp tongues—but there had been at bottom a genuine and hearty confidence in each other, a strong sincere affection, resting on mutual respect and mutual admiration. The feeling remained essentially unbroken, but the fine edge of it had suffered. Small occasions of provocation constantly recurred. Mrs. Carlyle consented to stay with Lady Harriet and submit to her authority as often and as much as she required; the sense of duty acting as perpetual curb to her impatience. But the wound burst out at intervals, embittering Carlyle's life, and saddening a disposition which did not need further clouds upon it."

Lady Harriet seems to have been particularly unfortunate in her methods of showing kindness. Her patronage was all too plain. While Carlyle was away in Lancashire, we read:—

"Lady Harriet Baring, hearing she was alone in Cheyne Row, had carried her off to Addiscombe, and little guessing the state of her mind, and under the impression that she was hypochondriacal, had put her under a course of bleeding. She wanted wine when she was exhausted; Lady Harriet thought wine unwholesome. She was not allowed to go to bed when fortured with headache. She suffered from cold, and lighted a fire in her bedroom. Fires were not allowed in Addiscombe so early in the autumn, and the housemaid removed the coals. Lady Harriet meant only to be kind, but was herself heaping fuel on a fire of a more dangerous sort. Carlyle himself was relieved when he heard that 'she was at home again, out of that constrained lodging.' 'My mother's rage,' he wrote, 'has been considerable ever since she heard of it; "that the puir creature could na get a bit fire! not so much as a bit of fire for a' their grandeur."'"

And worse than that appears later on:—

"The Carlyles were going for a holiday to Scotland. Lady Ashburton was going also. She had engaged a palatial carriage, which had been made for the Queen and her suite, and she proposed to take the Carlyles down with her. The carriage consisted of a spacious saloon, to which, communicating with it, an ordinary compartment with the usual six seats in it was attached. Lady Ashburton occupied the saloon alone. Mrs. Carlyle, though in bad health and needing rest as much as Lady A., was placed in the compartment with her husband, the family doctor, and Lady A.'s maid, a position perfectly proper for her if she was a dependent, but in which no lady could have been placed whom Lady Ashburton regarded as her own equal in rank. It may be that Mrs. Carlyle chose to have it so herself. But Lady A. ought not to have allowed it, and Carlyle ought not to have allowed it, for it was a thing wrong in itself. We fear it is the "great lady" who must do penance in this difficult matter. Certainly she was the great sinner, and more, she, and she alone, possessed the power to have made all things smooth at any time. Froude tells us Carlyle was enchanted for a while about the business, and speaks of the "bewildered goody." There seems something like enchantment indeed when one whose personal pride would not permit him to accept the Grand Cross or a grave in the Abbey, would permit his wife to ride with the menials of the greatest lady in the world.

STANDARD PAINT COMPANY.

Very few persons are aware that there is a paint manufactory in Sydney possessed of sufficient machinery, labour, and all necessary facilities, for making as much as 40 tons of paint per month. The factory is the property of the Standard Paint Company, and is situated at Cowper Wharf, Woolloomooloo, where from the size of the building it is one of the most conspicuous objects. It is claimed for the "Standard" paints that the pigments composing them are made to absorb a greater amount of oil than they can absorb in the usual mode of mixing paint. As is well known, oil is the durable part of all oil paints, and no paint fails until the oil has been destroyed or driven out of the pigments. In these "standard" paints it is claimed that a perfect combination has been attained, that the oil and pigments are made to amalgamate, and that thereby an impenetrable coating is formed which is unaffected by water or heat, and retains its brilliancy for years. These paints are composed of pure linseed oil, pure white lead, pure zinc, and the purest of colouring matter for tinting, which by the process of mixing cannot separate as in the ordinary mixing. The factory is a high building, the top or attic rooms of which are used for painting samples either on wood or paper, and for painting venetians. In this work the beauty, brilliance, and fineness of texture of the paints are manifested, and should the paint become soiled it can be washed or scrubbed, the effect being to restore its first brilliance. Another point in its favour is that being mixed thin it can be laid on with a broad brush, thereby affording great economy in time. At the top of the building are four large ship tanks, into which the oil is pumped up from the ground floor, and the building is reticulated by a certain number of pipes from these to the various pits or mixers, where the oil is required in the various processes of manufacture. On the floor below the attics are four mixers fixed with revolving arms so as thoroughly to puddle or mix the pigments, and this is the first process in the manufacture. One of these mixers is devoted to the manufacture of putty, which is then done up in balls, like lard, or in tins or boxes, for sale or use. On the next or lower floor are situated the grinders. Tubs of mixed pigments are sent down from the floor above, and the material is fed into a receiver or hopper, passing between two stones, one of which revolves. As the space between them can be regulated to a nicety, the pigment is capable of being reduced to the finest possible consistency, so that after passing through it it may be rubbed on to the smoothest surface possible without there being the slightest sign of grit or coarseness, indeed the paint so operated on is to the touch as soft as finest silk. There are several of these stones, made on exactly the same principle, but revolving at different speeds according to the requirements of the materials to be operated on. One of the mixers on the upper floor is placed so that the mixture passes through it into a small mill where the mixing is completed by revolving arms, and the oil and pigments are thoroughly associated, when the two pass into a lower mill where the two are again ground together, passing then into a large mixer in the floor capable of holding 1000lb. weight. Passing thence to the ground floor there is a long tank, subdivided into three compartments. The paint passes from the mixer in the floor above, and in this portion of the manufacture the art of colouring comes into practice. All along the first of these compartments or tanks are ranged large cask[illegible] where the paints are mixed finally for use, and drawn for tinning. The whole of the machinery is set in motion by a 20-horse power horizontal engine. The whole process of tinning, from making the tins to fill and seeling them, is done on the premises by the latest improved machinery. Two men close 500 or 600 tins in an hour, but of course a longer time is required for the larger tins, which are also fitted with handles, so that on their being opened the owner is a very handy paint pot. As a test of the quality of paint, some bricks were painted with it and submerged for a week with others which were not painted, and the results showed that while the unpainted bricks each absorbed about 4oz. of weight of water, the difference made in the weight of the painted ones by submersion was altogether imperceptible. The company has secured a large area of ground, so that as their business increases they will be in a position to meet its growing requirements. Adjacent to the factory is a large store in which some thousand barrels or more of material are stored. Persons interested in the process of paint-making can see it in work at the exhibition now being held in the Exhibition Building, Prince Alfred Park, where the company has an excellent display of exhibits.

SANITATION AND SMARK.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Having closely concerned myself the accounts and reports of smallpox appearing from time to time in your newspaper, and noticing some assertions to the effect that should the malady visit Sydney the extent the authorities would not be found wanting in preparedness for the worst and most revolting of scourges. This remark may be true regarding parts of Sydney suburbs, but one particular portion, situated at Darlinghurst, behind the houses at the north side of Calder-road, must be one of the exceptions, for there may be seen, under circumstances, a criminal neglect of the ordinary laws of cleanliness and sanitation. I allude to an exposed uncovered temporary sewer which extends for a considerable distance alongside a permanent almost completed one. This for some time has served the ordinary receptacle for dead cats, fowls, rats, and vegetable refuse, besides receiving sewerage of the neighbouring houses, and consequently give off in return exhalations of sulphuretted hydrogen, ammonia, and carbonic acid gases. It is for the health furthermore, in wet weather an enormous volume of water is discharged with vegetable and street refuse, sweeps down small street above Calder-road, thence along Shepherd-street, and is deflected, by reason of the surplus excavated up by the side of the new sewer, to the back of the mentioned houses, and there deposits its load of filth, the annoyance and discomfort of the inhabitants. Strong representations have been made by the corporation of Redfern or others that be to remedy this state of things, if I except the surface sewer at the crossing of Calder-road and Shepherd-street, recently constructed, which has not in the limited time mitigated the evil, as is proved by the number of boards which become bogged in wet weather at this place. Whomsoever the power rests, their neglect is amply stated by the condition of the new large sewer pipes in Shepherd-street, which are left alongside the sewer, and of them smashed in pieces and injured by reason of their being used for the neighbouring children. Who bears this expense?

I am, SLANTHE.

THE MEXICAN DEBT. Reuter's telegram from New York states that a telegraphic message from Mexico announces that the Senate has ratified the agreement between England and Mexico for the suspension of the Mexican debt. So far so good, but the receipt of similar telegraphic intelligence concerning Mexico during last year has inclined those interested to be very sceptical. In fact, the actual payment of the first instalment under the agreement is about the only thing that will allay the suspicion of those most experienced in Mexican dealings.—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE HOPEFUL MURDERS.

A Brisbane telegram in yesterday's Herald stated that on Monday morning sentences had been passed in connection with the cases of kidnapping which occurred on board the Hopeful, labour vessel. The sentences were as follows:—Captain Shaw and Scholefield, the Government agent, imprisonment for life, the first three years in iron: Freeman, the mate, 10 years' imprisonment, two years in irons; Rogers and Preston, seamen, seven years' imprisonment, one year in irons; Mills, the Government agent on board the Ethel, seven years' imprisonment, irons being dispensed with on account of his age; Burton, mate of the same vessel, two years' imprisonment, with hard labour, one year in irons.

The Brisbane Courier reports that on Friday last a deputation waited on the Premier for the purpose of representing the views of the public meeting held on Tuesday night in the Town Hall for the purpose of advocating a remission of the death sentences on M'Neil and Williams for the murder of South Sea islanders on the high seas during the last voyage of the Hopeful.

Mr. Midgely, M.L.A., introduced the deputation, which he stated had been appointed by the meeting at the Town Hall. Certain resolutions were passed, and these would be laid before the Premier by the chairman of the meeting. He wished to say that the accounts of the meeting published in the newspapers did not convey a correct impression of its character. He could assure the Premier it was most earnest and unanimous, and any impatience exhibited only arose out of a small difference of opinion as to the wording of the resolutions. There was nothing took place during the meeting that could in any way be construed into an expression of sympathy with the South Sea labour trade or with its crimes. Any arguments or statements in that direction were met with marks of dissent and incredulity. They were taking, as he believed, the proper and lawful means of making known their wishes. He also mentioned that petitions were being signed in various parts of the colony, and that over 5000 persons had attached their signatures for various reasons, but all with the same object—the extension of mercy to the condemned men.

Mr. Griffith said he had already received two petitions from Townsville, which contained statements that were entirely opposite to the facts. He hoped the petition that was being signed in Brisbane was not similarly inaccurate. He did not at all wonder that people signed a petition containing statements such as were in that from Townsville.

Mr. Widdop, as chairman of the public meeting, then handed to the Premier a copy of the resolution passed thereat. He said that, however much disposed, he would not add anything beyond stating that he approved of the action of the Government in bringing these cases to justice. He thought, however, that a commutation of the death sentence would answer all demands.

Mr. Griffith said he would express no opinion on the matter, but he should like to hear from the deputation what was the general feeling outside, and the ground upon which the exercise of mercy was sought. Was their first ground because they objected to capital punishment altogether? If so, that was intelligible, but it was not one upon which the Executive could act. Secondly, another ground might be that the evidence was not entirely satisfactory. He had not read the evidence through, but of course if the evidence was not thoroughly satisfactory and conclusive there was reason for asking that the prerogative of mercy should be exercised. But assuming for a moment that the evidence was clear and conclusive, then what ground did they ask for a commutation of the sentence?

The Deputation: Mercy.

Mr. Griffith: Merely on the ground of mercy if the evidence be conclusive. I hope mercy is not asked because they were sick fellows and savages who were shot?

The Deputation: No.

Mr. Griffith said if the evidence was true the murders were as foul as any ever committed.

Mr. Widdop said he would state his own opinion and that of many in whom he had come in contact. The colony had made illegal to go to these islands and recruit labourers, where international law was known. We are not blameless—he not wish to speak strongly, but——

Mr. Griffith: In short, you mean the hands of the colony are not clean?

Mr. Widdop said that was what he meant. He had no object to offer to the evidence. He had seen enough of the cruelty of the traffic which had been allowed to go on for long. He submitted that these men should not be made victims.

Mr. Griffith asked if they supposed that cases such as the Hopeful and frequently occurred. [Some of the petitioners expressed assent.] The atrocities on the voyage of the Hopeful were more and worse than all the others. He had not heard of such a voyage of murderous atrocity. He had in his possession a report from Mr. Milman, P.M. at Gympie. He had withheld that report from publication lest after the Hopeful cases were finished, as he had no wish to prejudice the mind of anybody concerned during the progress of the trials, but he thought it well to do so now.

Mr. Milman reported that the Hopeful, "after leaving Bentley Bay, sailed along the coast of New Guinea round the Cape, and when in some big bay where the points of land come close together, the ships' boats landed a party of recruit natives, who took the trade that was laid out for them and bolted into the bush. The white men followed, and one was speared; a fight followed, and 38 of the native were shot. At another place two natives were shot. The account of this affray I had heard previously of White at Kilerton Island (Burra Burra), and the particulars agreed entirely. It appears that on the boats landing the natives retreated into the bush, and the boats' crews fired their huts, on which the natives showed fight, and the boats' crews had to defend themselves, when the two natives were shot. . . . . White at Teste Island 21 natives, belonging to Milne Bay and Normanby Island (Wuan) endeavoured to escape by swimming on shore, two being drowned in the attempt. One who escaped was a woman who had been taken or seized from Normanby Island, her husband being left on shore. Most of these escaped men and the woman I saw at Teste. The woman had a wound in the head, inflicted by a tomahawk by one of the quasi interpreters, on his own admission." Again he (Mr. Griffith) had received a letter from Mr. Armit, who was at Moresby Island, in which he stated that he had obtained the following information from a Teste Island native named "Alex." who was on board the Hopeful. Mr. Armitt wrote:—"When off a certain spot in New Guinea—native language indeterminable—somewhere between South and East Cape or the adjacent islands, the boats were sent on shore to recruit. 'Alex.' was in one of these—the foremost one—and succeeded in obtaining several recruits. Among these were two young men—brothers. Their mother came running down to the boat, and begged one of them to return; but the man in charge told 'Alex.' to catch her. 'Alex.' jumped on shore, struck the unfortunate woman on the head with the back of a tomahawk, knocking her down, and then picked her up and threw her into the boat. The natives seeing this outrage perpetrated attacked the boat, spearing two white men, and two out of the three Teste Island boys; but I cannot vouch that they were all in one boat. The covering boat most likely came in to protect the recruiting boat, and some of her crew suffered. However, the boats opened fire, and three natives were shot. The recruits and woman were taken on board, and the vessel proceeded on her voyage. I was at Teste when the Hopeful came in, and H.M.S. Swinger was also there, and I believed inspected her. But on the night previous to this inspection, between 30 and 40 of the recruits deserted the vessel and swam ashore, two of them being drowned in doing so. The woman, who, the boys say distinctly, was repeatedly outraged by the whites, also escaped." Mr. Griffith also quoted from the report of the special commissioner of the S. M. Herald on the inquiry held by Commodore Erskine into the Johnstone River escapes cases. One of these detailed a number of incidents connected with the voyage of the labour vessel. In the first instance he spoke of Bentley Bay, which was probably the big bay referred to by Mr. Milman. The extracts were as follows:—"It was at Bentley Bay that they took a woman and boy from a village, but at Teste Island the woman escaped by letting herself down from the vessel by a rope and swimming on shore. The manner in which the woman was obtained was this. When the natives on shore were holding one of their feasts they were captured, and the boats of the vessel also pillaged and burnt the village, both boats being armed. At another place, when the natives refused to go on board a labour vessel when asked to go, rifles were used to make them do so. The natives then ran away, but the crew of the vessel fired at them from the boats, and several women were killed. At Normanby Island the natives came off from the shore in large canoes to trade, and when alongside they were fired upon. The natives in terror crowded to one side of the canoe and capsized it, and swam for the shore, but boats were at once lowered from the vessel, the natives chased, with the result that nine were taken alive, and three were shot dead, one of those captured being among the number to be returned to their home by the Commodore. The bodies of the natives who were shot were washed ashore. At another village the natives would not go on board the labour vessel and armed themselves with spears, and the white men armed themselves with rifles. One white man was wounded by a spear, and a native was shot dead. At other places no wrong was committed, and the natives were engaged on their return for hatchets and other articles of trade; but at a small village on Harris Island a native was shot because the white men were angry with the natives for asking too much trade. At this island it would appear that there were seven natives in a canoe, and that one was shot dead. The canoe then made off, but the boat of the labour vessel chased it, caught it, and took the remaining six natives on board the vessel and kept them there. One of them was wounded, and though he was cared for on board the vessel he died from the effects of the wound." Mr. Griffith reminded the deputation that these were all different from the crimes for which the men were tried. He confessed he did not think the colony of Queensland had connived at such a state of things. Such a story of atrocity was never laid before the public. Commodore Erskine would probably make a report, but he had not yet received it. When he first read the papers he had exclaimed that it would have been the proper thing if every man had been hung from the yard-arm.

Mr. Midgely said that they had refrained from saying too much. The general impression had always been that men going down into these islands and encountering such dangers became reckless. He submitted that to execute these two men for crimes which were part of such a series of atrocities would be, perhaps, concentrating the punishment too much. There was prevailing one feeling of gratitude that these things were likely to be put a stop to, but it was only reasonable to urge in consideration of the lengthened period during which the trade had been countenanced, its nature, perils, and customs, that a less sentence would meet the ends of justice.

Mr. Griffith said he should be sorry to think that custom had sanctioned anything like the Hopeful cases. If he thought so, he would never sign another license. (Hear, hear.)

Dr. Kesteven stated that he had heard of a great many cases from men engaged in the trade, but he admitted that the evidence had never been so clear.

Mr. Lissner said it was apparent the Government agent was not a protection.

Mr. Griffith asked how he could be when the officers of the Hopeful made him drunk.

After a few words from Mr. Stewart and Mr. Baynes, who declined to admit the guilt of the colony, the Premier promised to lay the resolutions and the views of the deputation before his colleagues of the Executive Council.

It was arranged that the Premier should receive the petitions for transmission to the Governor at 11 a.m. on Tuesday, the 16th instant.

The deputation then retired.

CALCUTTA INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.

The final meeting of the New South Wales Commission for the Calcutta International Exhibition was held at the offices of the Board of Technical Education, Phillip-street, yesterday afternoon. Sir Patrick Jennings, president, occupied the chair, and the following members were also present:—Messrs. H. Combes (vice-president), F. A. Franklin (executive commissioner), J. F. Burns, C. J. Roberts, R. B. Smith, Adams, Inglis, Captain Smith, Captain Eldred, Williams, A. Morris, A. Bennett, C. Moore, and E. B. Woodhouse.

Mr. R. D. Adams, on behalf of Captain Eldred, acting-chairman of the finance committee, read the finance committee's report, from which it appeared that they had received £2910 from the Government, whilst up to the end of November the expenses had been £2839 10s. 11d., leaving a credit balance of £70 9s. 1d. Against this there would be £45 15s. 10d. required for salaries and about £20 for other expenses—so that the total expenditure would be about £2985, against £2910 received.

The report was received.

VOTES OF THANKS.

Mr. R. B. SMITH moved,—"That the thanks of this commission be voted to the Government of India for the cordial recognition of, and valuable assistance rendered to, our representative at the Calcutta International Exhibition." He thought they would all agree to the proposition, for the Indian Government had rendered every possible assistance to the Executive Commissioner for this colony, and had shown every possible courtesy to this colony's representatives.

Mr. ROBERTS seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.

Mr. ADAMS moved,—"That this commission desires to acknowledge and place upon record the sense entertained of the services rendered by Mr James N. Stuart (of Balmer, Lawrie, and Co.), representative commissioner at Calcutta in connection with the display of New South Wales products at the Calcutta International Exhibition."

Mr. FRANKLIN seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.

Mr. BURNS moved,—"That this commission desires to express its appreciation of the very able and efficient manner in which Mr. Franklin, the executive commissioner for the colony, conducted our representation at Calcutta." He said the motion was not a mere formal one, for very much of the success of the colony at the Exhibition depended on the gentleman whose duty it was to carry out the details as agreed to by the commission, and in securing the services of Mr. Franklin they had been very fortunate. That gentleman had given a very good account of himself, and it was with great pleasure he moved the proposition.

Captain SMITH seconded the motion. The chairman said that, had it not been that Mr. Franklin's services had been fully borne testimony to on another occasion, he should have taken the opportunity to have made some comments on the motion, which, however, under the circumstances he took to be a formal record. He was sure the proposition would be heartily carried. The motion, having been put, was carried with acclamation.

Mr. FRANKLIN, in returning thanks, said the colony had taken a very high position at the Calcutta Exhibition, where it was pitted against many other colonies; yet it occupied the third position. The object of New South Wales taking part in the Exhibition was to create better business relations with India, and that had been attained. At the time it was difficult to find means of sending the exhibits cheaply and expeditiously to Calcutta, and as a last resort the commission were driven to ship the goods by the P. and O. Company's steamers. This caused some delay, and Victoria having a trade in horses with India was enabled to get her exhibits at Calcutta one month in advance of this colony, by which they were able both to get a better position and more time in which to do the necessary work; but since December last year there had been direct communication between India and New South Wales. Five steamers, aggregating 5600 tons, had arrived at this port from Calcutta bringing imports to the value of £57,103, and from January 1 to December 12 this year, or a period of 11 months, the exports amounted to £86,107. This colony was not making the same strides in this direction that other colonies were, but there had been evidence since his return from India of a demand there for our preserved meat and wines. He thought it would be found that the Commission had accomplished its object of increasing the trade between this colony and India. In conclusion he stated that he had received a present of seeds from the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India for the commission, and he had procured specimens of pottery from some of the north-west provinces, which he laid before the commission. It was decided that the seeds should be handed to the Government, and the pottery to the Technological Museum.

Mr. ROBERTS moved,—"That the thanks of the Commission be conveyed to the various Government departments and private companies who have co-operated in its local work, and thus contributed materially to the success of our representation." The departments are as follow:—Australian Museum Trustees, assistance in procuring natural history exhibits; Colonial Architect, exhibiting photos and photo-lithos of public buildings; Commissioner for Railways, for exhibits and free carriage of exhibits; costing steamship companies, concession in freights; Department of Finance and Trade, statistical information; Department of Mines, extensive collection of minerals and mineral and geological maps; Department of Public Works, exhibiting photos of LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.—TUESDAY, DECEMBER 16.

Banco Court.—(Before his Honor the CHIEF JUSTICE and a jury of four.)

BURT V. WILLIAM HOLMES (SIDNEY V. JOSEPH HOLMES (PART HEARD).

Mr. Rogers and Mr. Haydon, instructed by Mr. Gould, for the plaintiff; and Mr. Pulsford, instructed by Messrs. Hurter, Fitzgerald, and Asher, for the defendants.

This was an action brought by plaintiff, the owner of Dunal run, in the Warrumbungle district, to recover compensation from the defendants, who are free selectors, for trespass. The complaint was that the defendants trespassed upon the plaintiff's land, and there depastured their stock, questioning plaintiff's title and doing him other injury. Damages were laid at £1000. Plaintiff's case was that he is the lessee of the run in question, which consisted of 10,000 acres, and it had been in the family for 40 years, at a yearly rental for the greater part of the time of £50 a year, and during the last four years at over £200 a year. Towards the end of 1882 or the beginning of 1883, the defendants, together with other members of the family, took up conditional purchases on the run, and one of the defendants, William Holmes, subsequently sued in an application for a pre-lease adjoining his selection. He also brought about 1000 sheep on the run, which was duly granted on the selections and William Holmes' application pre-lease, but wandered over the boundary on plaintiff's run, where about 3000 cattle were depastured, the result being that the cattle had to be taken elsewhere, and plaintiff lost the use of a considerable quantity of reserve land. Joseph Holmes, who was in charge of the sheep on various occasions when they trespassed on plaintiff's run, was spoken to by plaintiff, and admitted that the sheep were in the habit of trespassing, but said that he found a difficulty in keeping them off. The trespass of cattle and horses belonging to other members of the family was also complained of, and it was contended in regard to the previous claims of William Holmes that he was not entitled to it. The fact of certain portions of land having been conditionally purchased by defendants was not denied, and in regard to William Holmes' pretence the evidence went to show that he applied to be allowed to take up a certain quantity of land adjoining his selection, or rather that taken up in the name of David Holmes, a minor. The two selects was taken up on the 5th October, 1882, and on the following day the application was made for a pre-lease. On the 25th October plaintiff applied to be permitted to purchase a portion of the land which had previously been put up to auction, but for which no bid had been made, and that was thoroughly sold to him at the upset price, and as the purchase of a portion of the defendant William Holmes' pretence, he was no longer entitled to it, as it did not satisfy the school land purchases as provided by law. A grant of the land so purchased was made to plaintiff on the 19th October, 1883, and some days afterwards the Minister for land gave his assent to William Holmes' pretence, which, however, under the law was abortive, and Holmes became liable to a forfeiture upon the selection or pieces of land as if he had allowed his sheep to stray over the whole of the plaintiff's run.

Verdict, having a view of the jury.

His Honor briefly summed up, explaining the law upon the pleadings, and placing the main facts in dispute before the jury.

The jury, after some deliberation, found a verdict for the plaintiff in each case, with damages £20.

Judgment accordingly.

Mr. G. H. Reid, instructed by Messrs. Slattery and Hoyle, appeared for the plaintiff. The defendant did not appear. The action was brought upon the ground that by plaintiff in April, 1884, to defendant, Elias Dwyer, to assist him in running a public house.

Verdict for plaintiff in the amount claimed.

Jury Court.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice INNES and a special jury of twelve.)

BUCKLE V. THE COMMISSIONER FOR RAILWAYS (PART HEARD).

Mr. Darley, Q.C., Mr. G. H. Simpson, and Mr. O'Connor, instructed by Messrs. Abbott and Allen, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. M. H. Stephen, Q.C., Mr. J. H. Stephen, and Mr. Noah, instructed by the Crown solicitor, for the defendant.

This was an action brought by plaintiff to recover £10,000 damages, owing to injuries said to have been sustained by the firm of Whitman and Co., of which plaintiff was a partner, in consequence of the defendant not providing proper facilities to them as contractors in constructing the Illawarra and Great Southern railway line between Goulburn and Narrandera. The case for the plaintiff has already been stated, and to-day the plaintiff was further examined in reference to the various causes of delay, which he alleged were due to a breach of agreement on the part of the defendant in supplying large numbers of trucks that were stipulated for, and in not starting the trains according to the time-table. A number of witnesses who were in the service of Whitman and Co. while the line was in course of construction were also called, and gave evidence as to the delay which occurred owing to the too frequent and sometimes irregular running of the Government trains, in consequence of which plaintiff had to reduce the number of his ballast trains. This not only impeded the work of "lesting" the line, but compelled him to keep the a number of men who had to be paid at the same rate as if they were constantly working. Evidence was also given that if contractors agreed to hand over a certain person of a line to the Government, provided that facilities were given to them to carry on their work, it must be taken to mean that they were not to be impeded in running their trains, and that the Government trains were to be subordinate to them.

The first witness called on behalf of defendant was John Hope, traffic manager on the Great Northern line, who gave evidence that when the rail-line was upholstered for by the plaintiff's firm were referred to him by the Commissioner, he told Mr. Whitman that he was sure the Commissioner for Railways would not accede to them. He further informed Mr. Whitman that the contractors would have to run their ballast trains according to the Government time-table, and that they would have to adapt the staff and ballast gangs in working the line. When the line was opened to Kangaroo he handed Mr. Whitman the Government time-table, and the latter made no remark in reference to it. Witness admitted, in cross-examination, that their night have been some delay occasionally in running the Government trains, but this could not have seriously impeded the contractors in their work, and every facility was all right than, considering with the public convenience in running their ballast trains.

At this stage the further hearing was adjourned till today.

In Equity.—(Before his Honor the PRIMARY JUDGE.)

ABBOTT AND ANDREW V. BARTON AND OTHERS.

Mr. Owen, Q.C., and Mr. King, instructed by Messrs. Abbott and Dodds, for the plaintiffs; Mr. R. F. Barton, instructed by Mr. Salway, for the infant defendants; Mr. Burton, Q.C., and Mr. A. B. Simpson, instructed by Messrs. Bradley and Bell, for the other defendants.

The plaintiffs in this suit were Thomas Ringwalt Abbott and Georgina Lyon Wallace Abbott, his wife, and the defendants were James W. Barton, Ramsay W. Barton, Mary Amelia W. Barton, Margaret Mabel W. Barton, John Lawrence Brown, and H. B. B. Bradley, Mrs. Abbott became entitled under the will of her father, James Walker, of Waldersway, to certain property on the death of her mother and to other real estate absolutely, besides moneys which were to be settled upon herself and her children absolutely. On the 19th September, 1864, the lady executed a settlement giving her husband (whoever he might be) a life estate with power to him and herself to appoint, in the decease of either of them to the survivor. A case was the mother married Mr. Edwin Barton, and in 1874, when they had four children, they exercised the power of appointment, giving the eldest son the real estate, and the other three equal shares in the personality of Mr. Barton died in 1876, and his widow intermarried with plaintiff, T. K. Abbott, in 1882. It was now prayed that the power of appointment might be restricted by the action in a power of revocation. It was claimed that, inasmuch as the lady had married again, the appointment which had been made was void ab initio.

Counsel having argued the case,

His Honor said he had been considering whether the proper course would not be to dismiss the suit, and refuse to declare any right in reference to the possibility of a second family, but to reserve the right to come in should that event take place. He did not think he could to interfere at present with the appointment, except where it seemed absolutely void. The settlement was certainly valid as regards all the property other than the money given by James Walker, and it was moreover 30 years old. By the settlement a power of appointment was given to a prospective husband and with the mother as he willed, amongst any children he, to one or more, exclusively of the others. This had been done by the lady's first husband, excluding by anticipation any future children. If the first husband and wife would not make a just appointment there never could be one, because a second husband might be in the same difficulty, and so with a third—until some survivor, perhaps not the mother, might alone have the power. However, as to the money left by James Walker's will, there was a paramount overriding direction which controlled both the settlement and the appointment; therefore, so far as either was at variance with it, it was ultra vires. Accordingly, he did not think any of the future-born children could be excluded to that, nor could the husband take a life interest by survivorship. He declined to make any declaration of the status of the parties or any of them, as they might become affected by the contingency of a family resulting from the third marriage of Mrs. Abbott; but he would reserve leave to the plaintiffs to come again in another suit for such declaration, should such event happen. He decreed that the female plaintiff and her children present or prospective were entitled to the money left by Mr. Walker's will, according to such settlements as the Court might direct. The male plaintiff would not be entitled to any life interest therein by survivorship as provided by the settlement. The Master was directed to institute inquiries of the trust fund represented money left to the female plaintiff and her children by James Walker's will, also what money was invested in real estate. All costs as between solicitors and client were ordered to be paid out of the estate. Further directions and further costs were reserved.

ALTHOUSE AND ANOTHER V. MARTIN.

Mr. W. G. Walker, instructed by Messrs. Salter and Bailey, for the plaintiffs; Dr. Sly, instructed by Mr. G. J. Sly, for the defendant.

This suit came on for a decree by consent, a submission having been filed by the defendant with his appearance, the claim only having been filed on the 15th instant. From the statement of claim it appeared that the plaintiffs were the executors and executrix in America of the "Alfonso Wardwick" and had been making or selling them under the designation for some time past, and exporting them for sale in this colony, and their sole agents in Australia, Messrs. F. Lassetter and Co., by whom they have been advertised and sold here for over four years. The defendants (trading as James Martin and Co.) had been selling similar windmills as agents, or under consignment from a firm in San Francisco. The defendant registered in November last the word "Alphonso" as applied to windmills, as his trade-mark. The plaintiffs at once instituted this suit to have this registration declared illegal, as being effected without the authority and in derogation of their title and rights, and to obtain the cancellation thereof. It appears that the San Francisco firm, defendant's principals, are licensed from the plaintiffs; but the defendant disclaimed all knowledge thereof, and submitted to the following decree: That the defendant deliver up the certificate of registration to be cancelled, and the registration be cancelled; that the defendant pay the fee for cancellation, with advertising expenses; that each party bear their own costs.

His Honor made a decree in accordance with the terms submitted.

STOCKTON COAL COMPANY V. FLETCHER AND OTHERS.

On the motion of Mr. Knox, his Honor gave leave to serve notice of motion for an injunction before the service of the statement of claim.

INSOLVENCY COURT.—TUESDAY,

(Before the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.)

In the matters of G. A. L. DeRes and J. Tainy, certificate meetings were called, but, as there was no appearance, they were struck out.

In the matters of J. B. Thompson, R. T. Gilbert, F. Brogan, W. C. Burge, J. B. Cilly, R. Field, J. S. Whitney, J. K. Doyle, J. T. Milligan, and Dunlop and Holledge, and ex parte Dunlop, certificate meetings were held and adjourned.

In the matters of W. Beverley, J. Mitchell, W. Aslaw, W. Smith, and C. Cox order was made for the issue of certificates as soon as court fees, fees, have been paid.

SUMMONSES.

A. J. W. Turgett, now of Chatham, on the Manning River, lately of Coopernook, on the Lansdowne River, hawker, formerly carpenter. Liabilities, £77 12s. 2d.; assets, £4 1s. 4d. Mr. Mansah, official assignee.

James Grossmann, of Allen-street, Leichhardt, lately of Glebe, out of business, lately a grocer. Liabilities, £267 12s. 9d.; assets, £74 16s. 4d. Mr. Lloyd, official assignee.

Christopher Lawson, of Wallaroo, storekeeper. On petition and affidavit. Schedule to be filed on or before the 30th instant. Mr. Stephen, official assignee.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT COURT.—TUESDAY.

(Before Mr. District Court Judge WILKINSON.)

CLAIMS OTHERS V. ARTIGNANI.

To recover £200 damages for breach of contract. Mr. G. H. Reid, instructed by Messrs. Figgis and Trickett, appeared for the plaintiffs, and Mr. J. Cohen for the defendants.

Defence. The plaintiffs' case was that the defendant had failed to carry out a sub-contract to do stucco work in number 3 sewer, and that a certain amount was due for goods sold and delivered. His Honor gave a verdict for the defendant.

MALLETT V. MASHERATIA.

This case was part heard on Monday, and a verdict was given for the defendant on Tuesday afternoon.

METROPOLITAN QUARTER SESSIONS.

TUESDAY.

(Before Mr. District Court Judge DOWLING.)

Mr. Charles Irving prosecuted, on behalf of the Crown.

ENTERING.

The following prisoners were brought up and sentenced:—Edward Johnson, alias Joseph Cohen, forgery, two years' imprisonment, with hard labour, to Maitland gaol; Eugene Sachtes, embezzlement from the Pyrmont Brewing Co., two years' imprisonment, with hard labour, in Maitland gaol; Henry Clement, embezzlement (two charges), two years' imprisonment, with hard labour; George James, stealing from the wharf, six months' imprisonment, with hard labour, in Parramatta gaol; George Jones, being found by night with burglary implements in his possession, five years' penal servitude; Henry Stanton and James Sandford, charged with having attempted to commit suicide, were each bound over in their own recognizances to appear when called upon.

ATTEMPTING TO WOUND.

Jean Baptiste, a Frenchman, was arraigned upon a charge of having attempted to wound Senior-constable Stapleton. From the evidence it appeared that on the 19th within the station at Darlinghurst, he came to house off the Old South Head Road, opposite the Waverley Lion Gardens, for the purpose of arresting the prisoner. He (the prisoner) on seeing the officer, drew from inside a blow at him with a knife. Fortunately, the officer stepped back and escaped the blow. A struggle ensued between the prisoner and Inspector Mitchell, who also had come to the house, and the latter received a cut on the hand. The prisoner, on being searched, had in his possession a large number of cartridges, and a loaded revolver. The prisoner, in his defence, said he was drunk at the time, and was sorry for what he had done. He was now ready to go to gaol. The prisoner was sentenced to 12 months' imprisonment, with hard labour.

Thomas Williams, a young man, was acquitted upon a charge of having indecently assaulted Rebecca Maud Laurence, a child 7 years and 11 months old.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

Elizabeth Allen, who pleaded guilty to a charge of having attempted to commit suicide on the 23rd ultimo, was sentenced to six weeks' imprisonment in Darlinghurst gaol, in order that she might be placed under medical treatment. James Maloney and Mary Ann Doyle, who also pleaded guilty to charges of attempted suicide, were bound over in their own recognizances to appear for judgment when called upon.

INFLICTING GRIEVOUS BODILY HARM.

Annie O'Brien, a young woman, was acquitted upon a charge of having inflicted grievous bodily harm upon one Isabella Thompson. James Philbert was arraigned upon a charge of having inflicted grievous bodily harm upon his wife, Elizabeth Philbert. The evidence showed that the parties had a quarrel, that the prisoner knocked his wife on the top of the head with a knife and inflicted a very severe scalp wound. The jury found the prisoner guilty with a strong recommendation to mercy. The prisoner was remanded for sentence.

UNNATURAL OFFENCE.

Thomas Kingston, a young man, was arraigned upon a charge of having committed an unnatural crime. The case was one of a most revolting character. The prisoner was remanded for sentence.

The following is a list of the cases down for trial on Wednesday:—Alexander Garrard, wounding; Charles Hutton, breaking, entering, and stealing in a dwelling; Martin Keegan, indecent assault; William Gilbert, maliciously wounding; Thomas Newland, inflicting grievous bodily harm; Margaret Quinn, attempt to commit suicide; Henry Partis, attempt to commit suicide; James Jackson, stealing from the person; George Dignam, larceny.

Epps's Cocoa.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. POLICE.

At the CENTRAL POLICE COURT yesterday, the bench in the Charge Court was occupied by Mr. Buchanan, S.M. James Austin, a labourer, was charged with having been on the premises of William Franklin for an unlawful purpose. The premises are situated in Rose-street, and potato-ground was found hidden in a bark room there. He was proved by the proprietor to have no lawful business in the place, and he was sentenced to three months' imprisonment, with hard labour. James Thornton, labourer, was charged with having stolen a watch, a chain, and two gold lockets, the property of John K. Talbot, an ironmonger, residing at 165, Darlhurst-street. On the previous night he was drunk, and missed the articles named from his possession. It was proved that witnesses went alongside him, took his watch and ran away with it along Oxford-street. Prisoner afterwards threw the watch over a fence, where it was found by some boys. He was now sentenced to six months' imprisonment. Bernard Ryan, found guilty of maliciously damaging the organs of glass, valued at £15, the property of William Dodgson, was ordered to pay the amount of damage, with a penalty of £1 in addition. In the summons Court the bench was occupied by Mr. J. E. Abbott, S.M. The list contained several cases of family or neighbours' quarrels, in which suitable fines were imposed. Several persons were also punished for violent conduct or using obscene language. Mary Jane Mitchell, found guilty of selling liquor on Sunday, was fined £10, with 5s. 6d. costs, or two months in gaol. Thomas H. Smith, found leaving a public house on Sunday with liquor in his possession, was fined £1, with 5s. 6d. costs. Jerusalem Fox and Frances Martin, found guilty of trading in fruit on Sunday, were each fined 1s., with 5s. 6d. costs. In the Licensing Court the bench was occupied by Mr. Buchanan and the Hon. J. Macdonald. The following transfers were granted:—Charles Steckhemer to E. Cope; J. Warren to A. Warren; Margaret Fox to John Friedwald. Music licenses: J. Harris, Town Hall, Glebe; J. Williams, London Tavern. A number of hawkers' licenses were also granted. The application for a removal made by James Brown from what was formerly the Clarence and New England Hotel to Liverpool-road, Ryde Town, was refused.

At the WATERS POLICE COURT yesterday, Mr. Addison, S.M., presided in the Charge Court. A number of offenders were summarily dealt with. Robert Gray was fined £2, or seven days' imprisonment, for knowingly having a train car without the best having delivered a ticket or paid his fare to the conductor thereof. Sarah Stafford, for being a suspected person frequenting Sussex-street with intent to commit a felony, was sentenced to two months' imprisonment, with hard labour. John Parsons, for breaking a gas lamp the property of the Gas Company, was ordered to pay the value thereof, 5s., and he was also fined 20s., or seven days in gaol. John Gorey and Sarah Gorey were fined £1 each, in default two months' imprisonment, for offending against decency. Mr Yates, R. A. Gladstone, of the business in the summons for James Lawler Jameson was not in court, but, counsel on three separate charges, by Edmund Sager, attorney for the Hotel Keepers' Association, appeared and having reported, under the Infectious Diseases Act, the names of three persons reasonably supposed to be sufferers from contagious disease, namely, Dr. Cannon, on behalf of Dr. Dobson, asked for a mitigation of the penalty. The Bench refused to grant the application, and fined the defendant the sum of £5, with 5s. 6d. costs, in default three months' imprisonment in each instance. Mr. J. W. Evans, Inspector of weights and measures, summoned a number of persons for having short weights and measures in their possession. Convictions were obtained in each instance. Several other cases were also disposed of.

At the ST. LEONARDS POLICE COURT yesterday, before Mr. W. J. Lyons, P.M., Robert Morton, 55, described as a sailor, was charged with stealing an order-book, the property of John Harding. Constable Foster stated that on Saturday night, 13th instant, about 11 o'clock, he saw the prisoner carrying the box produced, with the name of John Harding upon it, in the direction of Lane-cove-road. The box was subsequently claimed by John Harding, living at Blake's Point-road, as his property, which he valued at 10s. Prisoner said he was drunk at the time. He had served with distinction in the Navy, and was sentenced to 14 days' imprisonment. The same prisoner was also charged with assaulting a police constable while in the execution of his duty, and was fined £5, or two months' imprisonment. Joseph Brown pleaded guilty to a charge of carrying a weapon to render a constable in the execution of his duty, and was fined £5, or three months' imprisonment. Christopher Donoghue was summoned for carrying a knife for a horse by beating it on the head with the butt-end of his whip, and was fined 40s. and costs (3s. 6d.), or 14 days' imprisonment. The same defendant, for his brother, his name on his diary, was fined 5s. and costs (3s. 6d.), or two days' imprisonment. Mary Moore, for being drunk and disorderly, was fined 10s., with costs of Court (3s. 6d.), or 168 days' imprisonment. Eleven persons, for indecently bathing in Lane-cove River, were ordered to register their names, were each fined 10s. and ss. 6d. costs, or ten days' imprisonment. Three persons, for indecently bathing in the same place, who did not appear in court, were each fined £1 and ss. 6d. costs, or two days' imprisonment, and one for neglecting to register his name, was fined £1 and costs 4s. 10s., or three days' imprisonment.

CORONER'S INQUEST.

Yesterday the City Coroner, Mr. H. Scott, J.P., held an inquest at the Agricultural Hall in the Domain on the body of a man named John Stephenson, who died in the Sydney Hospital from the effects of injuries which he had sustained through being thrown out of a cart in Bathurst. The accident happened on saturday last, and Stephenson was conveyed to the hospital, but no injuries were so serious that he expired shortly after being admitted into the hospital. Thomas H. Jewell, a boy, found lying a puddle-hole on Sunday with liquor in his possession, was fined £1, with 5s. 6d. costs. Jerusalem Fox and Frances Martin, found guilty of trading in fruit on Sunday, were each fined 1s., with 5s. 6d. costs. In the Licensing Court the bench was occupied by Mr. Buchanan and the Hon. J. Macdonald. The following transfers were granted:—Charles Steckhemer to E. Cope; J. Warren to A. Warren; Margaret Fox to John Friedwald. Music licenses: J. Harris, Town Hall, Glebe; J. Williams, London Tavern. A number of hawkers' licenses were also granted. The application for a removal made by James Brown from what was formerly the Clarence and New England Hotel to Liverpool-road, Ryde Town, was refused.

SCHOOL EXHIBITIONS.

SYDNEY GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

The distribution of prizes in connection with the Sydney Grammar school took place yesterday in the large hall of the school. His Excellency the Governor presided, and a large number of visitors were present, most of whom were ladies. The pupils also attended in force, and those who were under turnout a guard of honour to receive the Governor, on the platform were Mr. Justice Windeyer, Mr. H. C. Russell (Government Astronomer), Dr. Garnet, J. Barbie, Dr. MacLaurin, Dr. Renwick, and Messrs. E. W. Knox, A. C. Cope, G. Knox, Mr. Justice Court Judge Williams, and Captain Jones, A. D. C.

The Governor said—I am very happy to be present here to-day to deliver the prizes to the successful candidates at the last examination, and I regret very much that the unavoidable circumstances I was not among you last year. I have read with the report of the examiners, but I understand that it is highly satisfactory, and that proof of an advance in both the upper and the lower schools, and of an increased sensibility and proficiency. I say especially observe that it refers to the French, Italian, German and Greek, which have been lately introduced, and which I am making this observation, I may also observe that Greek is—I think—the pet child of my own friend the Judge—at the University it has been made compulsory for candidates to take up either the French or the German language. I congratulate you, Mr. Pedge, and the school on the high position which it has taken in the late public examinations. I think it was written upon in the act of successful emulation, which is a proof that the Sydney Grammar School has maintained that high reputation under its present able administration which it has so deservedly acquired. (Cheers.) I have a few words of advice to offer which I hope will be printed on the minds and memory of my young friends. Remember, first, that this is your good time; that what you now you will assuredly one day reap. Remember, also, that the habits you now form and the practice you now follow, unimportant though they may appear at the moment to you, are really of deep importance, and will affect your welfare and happiness during the whole course of your lives. Besides, also, my young friends, that you have it now in your own hands—and it is a great responsibility—namely, the moulding of your future destiny. And now I will only add my congratulations to the successful candidates at the last examination, and I regret not been which I gave for the future success of those who in the present and future will follow in their footsteps. I wish you a happy, happy, happy holiday. I wish you a merry Christmas and a happy new year. (Cheers.)

The Rev. Mr. Pedge, on the examiners—Mr. W. G. Carroll, B.A., Mr. John K. King, M.A., Mr. Thomas Harris, M.A., Mr. A. Bulman, and Dr. Edward H. Kalnin, B.Sc.—were then introduced.

Mr. A. B. Wright, the head master of the school, said that the scope of the report was so generally favourable to Mr. Carroll, and he had little to add to it. Even those who would notice a new feature—a separate report on the modern school. Hitherto they had worked the classics and modern schools together. But at the request of the parents they formed the arrangement so complicated that they chose a class from between them, and the trustees had authorised a special examination in the modern school. They must be grateful, he thought, to see the favourable terms in which the teaching of the modern languages was commented on by the examiners. With reference to the natural sciences, which the report was not so satisfactory, he might say that the master who occupied the chair of the science, and he hoped that next year the principal difficulty which was opposed to this branch of study would disappear. The report upon English, he wished it to be noticed, referred solely to the modern school, and supplied information on the English teaching generally throughout the school. An opinion prevailed that because they attempted to teach the higher classes they neglected the more practical work of teaching English. He (Mr. Wright) however, was that high technique in English and classics were so closely connected that improvement in the one led to an equal improvement in the other. There was a great deal of general classical knowledge in the school. Some had attended the teaching of Greek would be surprised to see what number of boys who wished for a Greek scholarship, but he understand also that in this county there had never had a fair show. What old their best students know of Aristotle, Plato, or Thucydides? It was true that they were acquainted with the texts of those non-sense, but what did they know of the philosophy? It was only by keeping the lower classes in the school for another year or two, with modern thought, that the classical could indulge a reasonable prosperity; and he hoped that in the higher work of classics, to see instead of the English Scholarship, Greek scholarship. Had in honour and fair play to the boys, the royal papers in Greek that were sent from colleges in the Queen's Dominions, and the Greek papers, and the papers based on the classical examiner who accompanied they would be sorry to have to give a verdict in favour of the boys who had been subject. Still, he was probable were that the classical school is well conducted in a large number of the classical class, and the arrangements in the Greek examiners. If it were a more matter of the University examinations, if it were a more question of distinction, he would be sorry to see the Grammar School of Sydney had held its own against all the schools it has competed with, and what was the result? Last year, the Greek prize was gained by the best scholar of their University had been supplied by the boys of the Grammar school. They were proud of the honour of scholarship, but he thought it was duty to make the school. The whole end of education was not simply to pass these examinations. The object of education was not merely accumulation of facts. It was a consciousness growth of intellectual and moral power, and so long as they intentional a steady improvement in the student of the school they thought they were introducing constant growth in the moral one, a better sense of the obligations of duty, and a better appreciation of the duties of life. He thought they had study rounds, not to learn, and to be very thankful that they had a man at the head of the school, capable of dealing with the boys. The trustees knew the masters would do their duty. It was a man's duty to help his parents the best he could, and he was sorry, therefore, that the boys would be good enough to the school.

The next business was the distribution of the prizes, which was performed by Mrs. Pedge. The list of the prizes were taken by Garnet, Thompson, and Taylor, Harris also secured the prize for the Windeyer essay, and Taylor taken the prize for the Wentworth essay. The prize for French, in Thompson. At this stage of the proceedings a scene was arranged to present a medal for the best prize in the school. Mr. Pedge addressed a few complimentary words to each successful student. He is well known to the parents of the recipients of the honours, and he seemed to take particular interest in those who had been awarded prizes for their proficiency in the study of the French language. In each case the youth concerned was a Frenchman made a part of his study that language, and sometimes asked a question. In some instances the advantage appeared rather bewildering, but whether the same effect was produced on his Excellency's mind by the students' German knowledge was not so clearly manifest. In one instance a student who had taken a valuable prize was totally unable to reply to a question put to him by his Excellency. The distribution of the prizes and Mrs. Charlotte Allen, who was accorded the prize for the Windeyer essay, Mr. Wright stepped forward and explained that the prize-winner was only a new student. Mr. Justice WINDEYER then said he would like to say a few words on the subject of the distribution. The school board be congratulated the head master and the other masters on the flattering reports presented by the gentlemen who had examined the work of the school during the year. It was quite true that in the late public examinations the school did not appear to have carried off as many prizes as the Brisbane Grammar school and the Sydney High School. It must be remembered, however, that the schools were not really brought into competition with one another. Only such boys were sent up from the school as thought fit to do so, while boys from other schools probably were seeking to obtain exhibitions which they might use at once. The boys of this school were aiming at something of a different kind—at a higher standard. Many boys would present themselves for the public examinations at all, because they felt that it would raise their attention from their proper school work, and as they were anxious to make the best use of their time, with the view of preparing for the University, they thought that anything which would tend to interrupt their ordinary school work was undesirable. He also congratulated the supporters of the school on the increased interest taken in it by the general public. They had at last succeeded in obtaining from the Legislature an increase to their endowment, because a handsome sum for repairs and additions to the buildings. And not only had the Parliament at Westminster. They eventually selected Church Austin some as the best and most durable, and which was used until found by the test of experience to be bad and unsuitable. The same board had passed over as inferior and unsuitable the Farley Dale stone, which has turned out the best in every way.

Between 20 and 30 years ago in Victoria a scientific board was requested to select the best stone suitable for erecting the Treasury buildings, and they reported most favourably on Barrhee Marsh stone, which was used and proved an egregious failure.

Another scientific board was chosen to select stone to be used for the Library of the Victorian Parliament Houses; and to avoid the same error as was made for the Treasury building, these gentlemen reported upon another stone most favourably, and stated that it would last hundreds of years. It was used, and got rotten, and nearly all has been replaced.

I suppose it is these experiences that have caused the hesitation in erecting the façade of the Victorian Houses of Parliament. So much for scientific boards.

I am, &c., JOHN YOUNG.

to be the same as Mr. DALLEY's, that the "more private character" injured by a defamatory libel is "the person alone interested." The man whose horse is stolen is the person "alone interested." So is the man nearly choked by a garrotter and left with only a flicker of life. But is it so? Are not all these crimes punishable under the law because it is the public interest that they should be punished and suppressed? Libel is within the cognizance of the Criminal Courts because it may be an offence against the public; and whether a particular libel should or should not be treated as an offence against the public, depends for more upon the character of the libel than upon the position of the person libelled. According to Mr. DALLEY it is the duty of the Crown to prosecute if a public man, considered to be of high standing, is accused of corruption; but the protection of the character of private citizens is not a matter of public interest, and the State will not condescend to trouble itself about it. We do not deny the public interest in the former case; but we protest against the doctrine that it must be asserted as a matter of duty in that case, and contemptuously ignored in the latter, whilst in both it is affected on common grounds.

Undoubtedly the State has an interest in the character of public men. But such is the interest that the character of public men is held by the Courts to be more freely open to comment than the character of private men. When Mr. Justice FARCITT was asked by the jury whether a public man could be libelled, he said he thought he could; but "he thought it right to tell them that in discussing the conduct of a public man, far more liberty was allowed than in discussing the conduct of a person in a private position." The public interest demands that the character of public men should be known, and therefore, to vary the language of the Judge, of the two, the character of public men may be the more roughly handled. But this is hardly consistent with the doctrine that the State is under some sort of special obligation for its own sake to undertake the championship of public men's characters. It would be more in accordance with an assertion that the public interest may be more concerned in their exposure, and that when a charge is made against a public man the State should provide not only for the prosecution but for the defence. In his charge to the jury on Friday, Mr. Justice FARCITT said: "A person might even give into the motives of public men, and if he could show them to be corrupt—and no libel could be stronger than that which ascribed corruption to a public man in a high office—he would be entitled to an acquittal, and not only that, but to the respect and approbation of every well-thinking man." Under these conditions, can it be the duty of the State, while superciliously disregarding libels upon private character, to employ all its resources for the vindication of the character of public men because they are public men, and for that reason only?

It would be of interest to know whose duty it was, or whether it was anybody's duty, to vindicate the character of the public men whose character was assailed in Sir HENRY PARKES's address to the electors of Tenterfield of the 3rd November. There we read—"In the present Parliament political character has almost disappeared from the proceedings of the Legislative Assembly, and personal objects—to put the matter in the mildest form—have to a large extent absorbed that kind of consideration which has taken the place of deliberations and legitimate debate. I have lately seen immense sums of public money voted away by private pressure and bargaining in the face of the openly avowed convictions of members so plainly yielding up their consciences." How would these words (which mean wholesale corruption if they mean anything at all) look in an indictment for libel, with the innuendoes inserted to tell the jury exactly what they were understood to convey? But, it may be said, no name is given, and no one can be connected with the charge. Does that not make the attack the worse? Is it not levelled against majorities in the House? If the honour of the country is staked in the character of one public man, can it be unaffected by an accusation against majorities that carry votes in the House? It would, perhaps, be hard for the ATTORNEY-GENERAL to make this address the basis of an indictment, but had it been issued whilst the writer was a member, and Parliament was in session, it would have been somebody's duty to call for a committee of inquiry, to take evidence on oath, to require the accuser to say to whom he referred, and to make good or retract his scandalous words. But they were published after the writer had resigned his seat, after Parliament had been prorogued. And yet with these gross charges scattered broadcast, without investigation, to hear what meaning they may, to stick to anyone whom they may appear to fit, to bring the action of the Assembly into public aversion and contempt, we are told that it is the duty of the State to prosecute libellers of public men, although attacks upon private character shall remain unnoticed and untouched.

The criticism by the London Times on the rejection of the Federal resolutions by the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, shows that the question is beginning to be somewhat understood in England. The energetic representatives of Victoria had carried London by storm in the first instance, and had created a wrong impression as to the attitude of New South Wales. It is now beginning to be seen that the Federation movement was to a large extent artificial and got up, and not one of those natural growths out of which a permanent and satisfactory union would be developed. The New Guinea and the Recidivists business were simply used as levers to force a union which was wanted for other purposes. Both questions were placed in a false position. An immense effort was made to show that the colonies would lose their chance if they did not immediately federate, and so the attempt was made to rush Federation in a panic. It only wanted time to show the folly of these representations, and time has done its work. The writer in the Times now sees that the proposed reasons for Federation were not substantial enough; and while he regrets the delay, he does not regret that matters have escaped being placed on a false basis. The next attempt, he hopes, will depend on its own merits, and surely it is no small gain that a false step has been prevented. That these colonies should draw together as they grow stronger is not only desirable, but is inevitable; but it should be done in sincerity, and not hypocritically. The proper course to pursue is to increase the quantity of concerted action. If the colonies pull together as far as they can, they will find that the sentiment of union will grow, and that the causes of dissension will gradually diminish. This may be done to a large extent without destroying the autonomy of each colony in dealing with its own territory. It is the impatience of natural growth which has caused the present failure of the Federal movement. Victoria has been pre-eminent in carrying out the policy of isolation. No colony in the group has developed so rigid a system of protection. It is eager now to rush at once from one extreme to the other, and to change suddenly intercolonial protection for intercolonial free trade. The policy of New South Wales has been one of intercolonial free trade on the same footing as free trade with the rest of the world. If Victoria had adopted the same policy, we should be nearer now to Federation than we are, because the interests of the different colonies would be more closely interwoven. But the object of Victorian protection is avowedly to establish Victorian supremacy in respect to manufacturing industry. To aim at supremacy, however, is not the way to promote Federation; that ought to grow out of the full need of all parts for the union, and no colony is likely to feel the need of submission. There is only one satisfactory way of bringing about Federation, and that is by making all parties feel that it is to their interest; and this sense of interest will grow up gradually and unconsciously in proportion as the colonies live more and more like members of one family. The best way for Victoria to promote Federation, therefore, will be, not to put up false issues, but to pull down the chevaux de frise with which it has surrounded itself.

Our London Correspondent says that the extra demand of money for New Guinea is really to provide a steamer for General SCRATCHLEY, and he adds that if the colonies will not subscribe the proposed money it is likely that as little as possible will be done by the Government in New Guinea. We can hardly complain very much of that. The Protectorate has been established as our wish, and we ought to be prepared to bear a full share of the expenses; but at the same time, so far as the public is aware, the negotiations with the colonial Governments have been wretchedly managed. The Government have cannot give away money without the consent of Parliament, and it is necessary to place before Parliament a reasonable case. Nothing of the kind has been done at present. We have been asked to vote a lump sum, and then have been asked to double it, without any estimate of expenditure being submitted, or any statement of what was to be done with the money. That Major-General SCRATCHLEY should want a steamer is in the highest degree natural. At the present moment the British Government does not own an inch of land in New Guinea. It has forbidden other people to buy, and has not itself bought. The Commodore has hoisted the British flag, but it is upon land belonging to the natives. There is no site for a Government House or Government offices. Moreover, the Protectorate being only along the coast-line, and land-travelling being difficult, the easiest way for the new Governor to inspect his domain is to go from place to place by water. In the first instance at least the government will be through the existing chiefs, and the need for an official establishment on land will hardly arise, for the correspondence of the new Governor will be mostly with Bowning-street, and with the colonial Governments. A ship would in the first instance make the best Government House, and, on however small a scale, it would be a ship of war.

If the case were placed fairly before the colonial Parliaments, we have no doubt that the requisite funds would be forthcoming, especially if the British Government would at once complete the Protectorate by extending it along the north coast. One of our English telegrams to-day tells us that Germany contemplates establishing a colony in New Guinea. We hope that the rumour is not true; not because we have the slightest jealousy of Germany, or any wish whatever to check its trade, for which we have always given the freest facilities, but because we feel that a German settlement on the north coast would immensely increase the embarrassments of our occupation of New Guinea. Germany has not any interest on the north coast of New Guinea, and none that it could acquire would be a fair set-off against the trouble it would create with Australia. It is important that the British Government should act with becoming firmness and promptitude, and not leave a good work only half done. When Major-General SCRATCHLEY comes out, it is to be hoped that he will have freedom to act, and that matters will be placed on a better footing than they are at present.

We publish elsewhere a telegram from London which gives an outline of the amendments proposed by the Imperial Government in the Federal Council Constitution Bill. Previous telegrams have described them as merely "verbal." It will be seen that they introduce substantial change. Under the bill as it stood, a colony once entering into the compact must have continued bound by it. No provision for withdrawal was made. The colonies having married in haste would have been left to repent at leisure, without relief through any law of divorce. Now provision for optional retirement is made. Another change is the recasting of section 26, which provides for the payment of the Council's necessary expenses, and whether that is to be a substantial or only a verbal alteration we have yet to learn. Other amendments narrow down the original jurisdiction of the Council in certain matters where the provisions of the bill now foreshadow conflict with the Imperial authorities and the colonial Legislatures, and these are questions of legislative power, not of mere words. But making the most of all that the Imperial Government suggests, the disappointing conclusion from the telegram is that the political defectiveness of the project as a whole is still only imperfectly understood by the authorities, or that they are still for the most part indifferent where the Imperial interests of the home are not visibly concerned. As the Times of the 3rd November remarks, "The proposed Federal Council has been pronounced by colonial as by English opinion to be too small for a Parliament, and to be without the moral force to compel obedience to its dictates. Its prerogatives would have been too extensive for a body like it to wield. It was to have been given a title to command before it had proved its competence to persuade." Objections like these, not those contained in the memorandum of the New Zealand Government which we noticed the other day, are not met by the feeble remedies to which the telegram points. The action of the Imperial Government is like that of a man who finding a tub with the bottom out, applied a sheet of tissue paper to close the breach. If the Council is to remain as constituted under the bill, it should be deprived of the power to make laws. If the Council is to be empowered to make laws, its constitution should be such as to secure for it intrinsically greater weight than that of any one of the separate Legislatures over which its laws would prevail. No interior change would make the bill worthy of acceptance.

A correspondent who complains so bitterly of mismanagement on the Northern Railway, and of being unable to obtain redress, does not say that his grievances have been laid before the Commissioner. If correctly stated, some of them are of sufficient gravity to warrant him in placing them before the highest authority in the Department. Only one train a day from Newcastle to Tamworth may be all that the necessities of the case require; and slow trains, or trains behind time, may be amongst things inevitable on the Northern line. But the detention of goods, and the peculation said to be going on somewhere between Sydney and Northern towns, are things of another class. Being matters of fact, if they exist at all they should be stated with details of time, place, and extent of damage or loss. Eight days from the metropolis to Tamworth is too long for the transit of the largest piece of goods sent up, and it small parcels are as long as that in course of transit there is oversight somewhere. Our correspondent gives the impression that the instances named by him are only a few out of many, for which local authorities cannot provide redress, and as to which consignees are settling down in despair. The pilfering named is worse than the delay; but goods having to pass the hands of two or three sets of carriers, the fault is not easily shorted home. Complaints have been made of both steamers and railways, and all that consignees can do is to assure both parties that the wrong lies between them. A private company might not manage the railways better than the State does, for some of the evils complained of—the worst of all, for instance—appear to lie against all persons concerned in carrying the goods. The steam companies and the Railway Department will be anxious to correct those irregularities. It is not quite clear where our correspondent intends to complained when hinting that no redress is found, because the Northern districts are not yet connected by railway with Sydney. When that junction is happily made, he and his neighbours may have grievances; but now, as readily as then, the authorities will no doubt attend to them. His letter should lead to an inquiry.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

News of a satisfactory character has been received at Cairo concerning General Gordon. He continues not only to hold possession of Khartoum, but to harass the enemy; in fact, he has dislodged a great number of the rebels in true military fashion. Having successfully undermined some forts erected by them a few miles from Khartoum, he proceeded to blow the forts to pieces. This must have proved a new though a very fatal sensation to the enemy, and the result of Gordon's operations in the way of underground engineering will probably not be without effect upon the bloodthirsty followers of the Mahdi. Regarding the expedition for the relief of Khartoum, we learn from another part of this morning's cable-gram that one portion of the expedition has reached Korti, a short distance beyond Awkulol, on the Nile, and that Lord Wolseley and the headquarters staff are on their way to that place.

At a meeting of the Executive Council held yesterday the appointment of Mr. G. H. Smithers as clerk of Petty Sessions at the Water Police Court was confirmed. It was arranged that the 9th January next should be proclaimed a public holiday at Wollongong, and that the 16th should be a public holiday at Shoalhaven, in both cases on account of visits from the English cricketers.

Mr. S. COXON, C.M.G., is, we understand, about to proceed to Great Britain, and intends also to visit the continents of Europe and America, with a view to inquire into the working of technological museums, colleges, and schools.

Sir ARTHUR ROBERTS has been granted leave of absence from all his Government appointments for one year from the 1st of February next.

The proclamation issued on behalf of her Majesty Queen Victoria by Commodore Erskine, on the 6th ultimo, authorising the establishment of a protectorate over a portion of New Guinea, is published in a supplement to the New South Wales Government Gazette issued yesterday.

We are informed by the Department of Mines that a report has been received from Mr. Kleg, mining warden of Milparinka, to the effect that there had been a general rain in the district, which had had the effect of filling all the wipers' dams and water-holes, with the exception of Milparinka water-hole, in which there is sufficient water to last through the summer months. At Mount Browne about two inches fell, flooding all the creeks, and washing away most of the dams and reservoirs. At Milparinka about 30 points fell; at Ethiabuurra about an inch and a half fell. The rain had afforded very great relief to the pastoralists in the district. Eight camels had just arrived from Port Augusta with goods. After the rain a woman named Mrs. Barnes picked up on the surface over an ounce of gold, in specks up to 10 pennyweights.

At an examination lately held to determine the qualifications of candidates for license to survey under the Crown Lands Act, the following gentlemen were found by the board to be competent, and have been recommended to the Secretary for Lands for appointment:—Alan Morham Mandell, George William Walker, James Silk, Alfred Hugh Claudius Beresford Conroy, Reginald de M. Motte Mott, George Waters Lassing, Thomas Harley Fawns, Alfred James Petersen Hickson, George Edward Weiss, James Dalgleish Clarke, Archibald Charles Macdonald Lockhart, Algernon Townsend Grenvill, Sydney Richmond Irving, John Murray, John Edward Mantz, Charles Daniel Adams, John Eugene Daly, and William Short.

The action Young v. the Commissioner for Railways was continued yesterday in the Jury Court, before Mr. Justice Innes and a special jury of 12. The plaintiffs case was closed, and evidence was being taken for the defendant when the Court rose. In the Banco Court, before the Chief Justice, the only case of interest was that of Digby v. Holmes, in which the plaintiff, a squatter, sought to recover compensation from defendant for trespass. A verdict was returned for plaintiff with damages £30. Today the postponed cases Chisholm v. Cole and Wilson v. the Minister for Works will be taken in the Banco Court. His Honor the Primary Judge declined to make any declaration in favor of the plaintiffs in the suit Abbott and another v. Barton and others, by rectifying the power of appointment exercised by the female plaintiff and her former husband, Mr. Edwin Barton, in respect to her children. He, however, reserved leave to the plaintiffs to proceed in another suit should there be a second family. Costs were ordered to be paid out of the estate. His Honor also disposed of a number of general matters in Equity, including a decree by consent in the suit Authouse and another v. Martin, the defendant having wrongfully registered the plaintiffs' trade mark. Although as applied to "windmills," Tuesday his Honor will hear the arguments in the suit Attorney-General v. Sneddon and another.

Two fresh cases of smallpox are reported. This time the disease has manifested itself at Moss Vale, one of the prettiest and healthiest townships on the Southern line. The names of the persons who have been attacked by the malady are Henry Levy and a young female named Minnie Cohen. They reside in the same house in Moss Vale, together with Mr. Levy's sister and his wife. It is stated that Miss Levy visited Mrs. Cohen's house, 260, Elizabeth-street, some time ago, and it is supposed that she was at the place while Mrs. Cohen's son was suffering from smallpox, but it is not exactly known when she returned to the southern township. The patient Minnie Cohen had only recently arrived at Moss Vale from Sydney. Dr. Manheim received information to the effect that there were some suspected cases of variola at Moss Vale on Monday, and accordingly he despatched a medical man thither at once to inquire into the matter. On examining the patients Levy and Cohen the doctor discovered that they were suffering from smallpox in a modified form. Preparations were immediately made in order to have them properly isolated, and a qualified nurse has been sent to Moss Vale to take charge of the sufferers. It is to be hoped that the disease will not spread any further in the township; and taking into consideration the energetic measures for dealing with the outbreak which have been adopted by the health authorities, it seems quite reasonable to suppose that it will be speedily stamped out in that quarter of the colony. At the quarantine station all the patients are doing very well, with the single exception of the man Cussy, a butcher from Ultimo, who is reported to be dangerously ill.

The summons issued against Dr. James Lawlor Donovan came on for hearing in the Water Police Court yesterday. Mr. Yates, P.S.M., presided. The doctor was summoned under the Infectious Diseases Supervision Act, by Mr. Sager, secretary to the Board of Health, for not having reported in writing to the proper authorities the names of three persons who were reasonably supposed to have been suffering from smallpox—namely, Harry Ringsbury, Rachel Marks, and Joseph Cohen. Defendant pleaded guilty. Mr. Gannon, on behalf of Dr. Donovan, applied for a reduction of the penalty which the Act allowed. Mr. Yates did not see his way clear to comply with the application, and the defendant was fined in the sum of £50, with 5s. 6d. costs, for each of the three cases; in default, three months' imprisonment for each offence.

The Royal Commission on the Conservation of Water met yesterday, the following members being present:—Mr. W. J. Lyne, M.L.A., president, in the chair; Mr. R. Barton, M.L.A., Mr. J. R. Jenkin, Mr. F. A. Franklin, C.E., Mr. E. B. Gepps, C.E., Mr. R. L. Murray, M.L.A., and Mr. D. McMeekin, C.E. The chief object of the meeting was to consider the report of the engineer of the commission, Mr. H. G. M'Kinney, on the proposal to make a new cutting from the Murrumbidgee into the Yanko Creek for the purpose of increasing the supply of water in the latter. The report as submitted by the president was with slight alterations adopted.

Yesterday afternoon the final meeting of the New South Wales Commission for the Calcutta International Exhibition was held at the office of the Board of Technical Education. There was a large attendance of members, Sir Patrick Jennings occupying the chair. The proceedings were mostly of a routine character, and a number of votes of thanks were recorded. The proceedings will be found reported in another column.

There was a moderate attendance at the Wealth and Industrial Exhibition yesterday. The Artillery Band was present and played a number of popular selections of music. The Government engine to work the machinery in connection with the electric light has arrived, and the building will be lit at night by means of electricity.

At the usual weekly meeting of the house committee of the Benevolent Asylum, held yesterday, attention was specially drawn to the overcrowded state of the institution at the present time, there being in the house 738 women and 161 children—a total number far in excess of that for which accommodation could properly be found. The committee further remarked that although the Government had been advised from time to time as to the risk, from a sanitary point of view, of overcrowding the different wards, the matter had been disregarded, the result being that the management had been put to considerable straits to find even temporary accommodation for the inmates, many of whom being sickly, anything like overcrowding would prove highly detrimental to their recovery.

At the close of the yearly work of the Sydney Technical College Mr. G. H. Reid has consented to deliver tonight, in the large hall of the School of Arts, an address on the interesting subject of "Industrial Education, from the Kindergarten to the University, in the Old World and the New."

Mr. MCKINNON, who arrived from Queensland on Sunday last by the steamship Warrego, brought with him a young cassowary, which was embarked on the steamer at Cooktown. He presented it to the Zoological Society. On Monday morning it was landed and taken to the resting grounds at Moore Park, and placed in a pond, where it has apparently already recovered from the effects of the voyage.

The sittings of the Metropolitan Court of Quarter Sessions were continued before Mr. District Court Judge Dowling, at the Darlinghurst Courthouse, yesterday. Mr. Clarke Irving prosecuted on behalf of the Crown. A number of prisoners who had pleaded guilty on the previous day were placed in the dock and sentenced. Several cases of an unimportant character were dealt with during the day. The Court adjourned at half past 4 o'clock until 10 o'clock this morning. A list of the cases for trial to-day appears in another column.

A CORRESPONDENT by the overland route from Melbourne to Sydney writes to complain of the practice of the Railway Department in allowing numbers of persons to congregate on the railway platforms, especially on Sunday evenings, who have no business there, but who make their presence potentially objectionable to the passengers by rudely peering into every compartment and trying to make facetious remarks on the passengers. This conduct was particularly noticeable at Cootamundra, Harden, and Yass; and, in order to prevent travellers from such unwelcome and unlooked-for attentions, our correspondent suggests the introduction of the barrier system at the country stations, by which those only who have business on the platforms would be allowed there.

A COMMISSIONER writes from Bathurst, protesting against the action of the city authorities in imposing upon the outside the intermittent water supply system, while the residents of the city enjoy an unlimited supply which they can utilise for washing carriages, watering gardens, &c. He also asserts that more water will be wasted under the intermittent system than would be used were the supply not temporarily cut off, as the citizens will, naturally, store up as much water as they can, which will be allowed to run to waste when the fresh supply is turned on.

A LITTLE fellow named Charles Smith, aged 4 years, was run over by a baker's cart in Oxford-street yesterday afternoon. The boy was conveyed to the Sydney Hospital, where it was discovered that he had sustained a fracture of the thigh.

The man George Cheyne, who was severely injured while felling a tree at Eastern Creek on the 5th instant, expired in the Parramatta Hospital yesterday morning. An inquest will be held on his body this afternoon.

THE Germans (observes the Spectator) have been holding their general elections. It is known that the united fractions now called "Liberalists" have suffered heavily, losing, it is believed, thirty seats. These have been captured either by Conservatives or by Social Democrats, who have won ten seats already, and may end with twenty-two. In Berlin two Socialists, Singer and Hasselmann, have each received more than 24,000 votes, being nearly double the highest number given to anybody else. It is reported that they have also shown strength in Brunn, Brunswick, Carlsruhe, Darmstadt, Dresden, Elberfeld, Erfurt, Gotha, Konigsberg, Hanover, Magdeburg, Marienze, and Nurnberg, the "poison" having apparently attacked most working cities, however varied in local circumstances. On the other hand, the Clericals return their full numbers, as do also their weaker allies, the "Guelfs" of Hanover (11), and the Poles. It is calculated, therefore, that Herr Windthorst will still hold the balance of power, and that Prince Bismarck cannot organise for his Government a trustworthy majority. He will, nevertheless, go on governing.

THE Royal Geographical Society (says the Pall Mall Gazette) is on the point of obtaining some very great particulars with regard to the food which kept Mr. Thomson and his companions in life for a considerable period in the African jungles. There was a disease in the land, and no choice of food. "In Africa one has sometimes to do as the natives do. In England you would refuse to eat meat the bones of which you could crumble to dust in your hands. Not a pleasant subject? No, but it is not all odes and ale in Africa. It was certainly remarkable that I did not lose a single man at this time." "And still more remarkable, was it not, that your men did not lose you?" "Well, they expected to do so, though I have fatigue better than the strongest of them. But dysentery laid its hand on me, and kept me down for two months. However, here I am, you see, completely restored to health, though not without an occasional twinge to remind me of the time when I had to be carried, like so much baggage, through Africa on an improvised litter." Mr. Thomson will also have to tell of some extraordinarily rapid marches at a time when water had run scarce and wells were far distant, and the tea-drinkers will learn with interest that their favourite beverage was the only European commodity he took with him for consumption.

A SPECIAL meeting of the Royal Society is to be held this evening, when Mr. Caldwell will exhibit specimens illustrating his researches into the embryology of the marsupials, monotremata, and ganoidei.

PARLIAMENT OF QUEENSLAND.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BRISBANE, TUESDAY.

The whole of the sitting of the Legislative Council to-day was occupied with the debate on the Assembly's message in reference to the amendments in the Land Bill. The House, by large majorities, decided to insist on all the principal amendments.

In the Assembly, the Officials in Parliament Bill and the Bundaberg Gas Bill were read a third time and passed. The House went into committee to consider the Loan Estimates. Sir Thomas M'Ilwraith asked whether the fate of the Land Bill would affect the loan, and what would be the alternative if the bill did not pass? Mr. Dickson said that the Government had a right to assume that the Land Bill would become law, and the Loan Estimates were framed on that assumption, but the time had not arrived to say what would be the result of the measure's not passing. Sir Thomas M'Ilwraith then criticised at length the proposal of the Government to borrow such a large sum, thus taking away from Parliament the control of the loan expenditure for several years. He maintained that the Government were failing to satisfy all their supporters, and would have to bring down another Loan Bill. He also pointed out that Parliament itself would change in the course of three or four years, and it was wrong for the present Parliament to say what works should be carried out in future years. He likewise complained of such a large question being brought forward at the tail end of the session, and said had there been a full House he would move a vote of want of confidence. Mr. Dickson maintained that the circumstances of the colony were far more encouraging for a large loan now than they were in 1879. He also said the Government would be bound by the Estimates, as they could not devote money for other purposes than those for which it was voted. Mr. Macrossan strongly blamed the Treasurer for ignoring the present position of the Land Bill. He pointed out that the proposed loan was more than the whole of the Customs revenue of the colony up to June last, and deprecated the proposal of the Government to obtain control of such a large sum of money. A lengthy discussion followed.

THE GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY OF AUSTRALASIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, TUESDAY.

The third meeting of the Victorian branch of the Geographical Society of Australasia was held this evening in the Royal Society's Hall, Baron Von Mueller, vice-president, in the chair. There were also present the delegates from New South Wales, headed by Sir E. Strickland. The delegates had a cordial reception. Sir E. Strickland moved the first resolution, which decided on the formation of a Geographic Conference for the purpose of discussing periodically matters affecting the interests of geographic science in Australia. He mentioned that the intention of the society was to organise an expedition to New Guinea, for which the Victorian and New South Wales Governments had given £1000 each. Dr. Bride seconded the motion, which was passed. Mr. J. R. Mann, who has just returned from New Guinea, where he went with the Protectorate declaration party, said that the exploration of New Guinea must be undertaken with great caution. The promises of personal security, and the security of the land, made in the proclamation read by Commodore Erskine, should be strictly adhered to, because if the confidence of the natives at the present time were broken the task of exploration would be very much increased in difficulty. Mr. Julian Thomas suggested, amidst applause, that the Rev. Mr. Chalmers should be asked to undertake the exploration for the society. The Rev. Mr. Lawes was also alluded to in complimentary manner. A letter, written by Leichhardt at Canning Downs, in 1844, and addressed to Sir Charles Nicholson, was read. The conference for which the Sydney delegates have come down, will commence to-morrow evening.

SERIOUS STABBING AFFRAY AT PORT ADELAIDE.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

ADELAIDE, TUESDAY.

A serious stabbing affray occurred at Port Adelaide late to-night. A Dutch seaman belonging to the American barque Hudson, now discharging at the Commercial Wharf, named Charles Shamoce, went to visit a countryman named Christopher Offiouse, who lives in a dilapidated house in Quebec-street. After a few minutes' conversation they quarrelled. Shamoce said Offiouse had struck him. He then drew a sheath knife and savagely stabbed Offiouse in four places in the breast and shoulders. Shamoce was promptly arrested. The injured man is not expected to live, and was conveyed to the hospital.

DREADFUL RAILWAY ACCIDENT IN NEW ZEALAND.

[BY CABLE.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

WELLINGTON, TUESDAY.

A terrible accident happened to-day to a picnic party at Raingiora, which was attended with fatal results. The party were driving across the Christchurch-Amberley railway line, when a train ran into the vehicle, killed a man named David Kerr on the spot, and a woman named Maggie Morrell, who had a leg and an arm cut off, died shortly afterwards. Nine others of the party were seriously injured.

GROUNDING OF THE STEAMER GLANWORTH.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BRISBANE, TUESDAY.

The steamship Glanworth, which left Brisbane for Cooktown on Saturday, went ashore at Seven at 4 o'clock this morning. She is on the reefs near Stone Island, in an unsafe position. The vessel from amidships forward is aground, and there are 12 feet of water in the hold.

OVERLAND PASSENGER TRAFFIC.

THE FEDERATION ENABLING BILL.

LONDON, DEC. 15.

The amendments in the Draft Federation Enabling Bill are as follows:—In clause 15 the first three subsections, which give the Council legislative authority over the relations of Australasia with the islands of the Pacific, the prevention of the influx of criminals, and fisheries in Australasian waters beyond territorial limits, have been struck out, because they conflict with the authority of the colonial Chambers and the action of the Admiralty, and require Imperial sanction. Clause 26, which provides how the expenditure by the Council shall be defrayed and ultimately contributed and paid by the several colonies in proportion to their population, has been recast. A new clause has been added which provides for the optional retirement of any colony from the federal union.

RETURN OF AUSTRALIAN COLONISTS.

THE SOUDAN EXPEDITION.

CAIRO, DEC. 15.

General Lord Wolseley and the headquarters staff of the army have left Dongola en route for Korti, a short distance beyond Ambukol. Advices have been received that Colonel Herbert Stewart, with the mounted infantry, guards, and camel corps, has reached Korti, where he found ample supplies. The tribes in the vicinity are reported to be friendly.

FURTHER SUCCESS BY GEN. GORDON AGAINST THE ENEMY.

CAIRO, DEC. 15.

News has been received here from the front, which states that a messenger has arrived at the British outposts from Khartoum, reporting that General Gordon continues to harass the enemy in the vicinity of that place. He has for some time past been undermining the forts erected by the rebels at Omderman, a few miles from Khartoum, and the mines have been successfully exploded, with the result that a considerable number of the enemy have been killed and wounded.

THE REVOLT IN THE COREA.

SHANGHAI, DEC. 15.

Further reports show that the statement that the revolt in the Corea broke out during a banquet given by the British representative to the King and his son, is incorrect. In other respects the information regarding the revolt is accurate.

VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, TUESDAY.

The Scots Church Session was cited to appear to-day at the Melbourne Presbytery to explain their action in sanctioning the congregational meeting which the assembly had declared to be illegal. Messrs. J. G. Stewart and T. Bromfield attended, and after hearing the matter in private, on the motion of the Rev. E. Robinson, seconded by the Rev. A. Hardie, it was agreed to adopt a resolution setting forth that as the session disclaimed any intention to act contrary to the letter or spirit of the law, the presbytery would proceed no further in the matter, beyond expressing regret that they had sanctioned such a meeting, and continuing them to be more careful in the future. The proceedings are understood to have been of a conciliatory character, and a committee was appointed to consider the best means of carrying into effect the invitation of the assembly to pay a presbyterial visit to the church, and in a friendly and Christian spirit to endeavour to bring the congregation into harmonious relations with the denomination.

The officers of the Lands Department are busily engaged in the preliminary work for bringing the new land Act into operation.

The Lands Title Commission has completed the taking of evidence. The last evidence taken was that of Mr. Pearson, the principal draughtsman in the Titles Office at Sydney, whose evidence with respect to the most expeditious manner of effecting transfers by endorsement in New South Wales much impressed the commission. The preparation of the report is now being proceeded with.

Reports from all parts of the colony show that for many years past there has not been so heavy a fall of rain in December as there has been so far this month. The weather is very unmanageable yet, but there are some signs of improvement.

A widow named Newton, residing in Rathdown-street, Carlton, alleges that on Saturday evening seven men entered her cottage and successively outraged her, and then left after stealing a number of articles. Her story, however, is doubted.

The property in Collins-street, occupied by Messrs. Milson and Company, tailors, having a frontage of 83 feet by a depth varying from 66 to 91 feet, has been sold for £22,000, or about £265 per foot. The property has been sold to the Premier Permanent Building and Investment Society.

Two young men, named respectively William and Hugh Brown, sons of Mr. Brown, the distiller, went on Saturday evening with a man named Murray in a small yacht, intending to go to Frankston, but neither they nor their boat have been heard of since, and it is feared that they were overtaken in a squall and drowned. The Government steamer Dispatch has been sent round to see if any traces can be found of them.

The Railway Commissioners have proposed to shortly adopt the practice followed in England of allowing railway accident insurance tickets to be sold at all of the booking offices in the colony. This will be under an arrangement with an accident insurance company.

Wm. Barnes, a notorious criminal now in Pentridge, insists that before he entered prison this time, he murdered, in September last, the well-known J. B. Slack, who was found with his throat cut in his house at South Melbourne. The police have some reason to believe that there is some ground for crediting the story.

A public meeting to support the operative bootmakers was held in the Fitzroy Town Hall to-night. The attendance included a good number of bootmakers; but on the platform were several employers of labour not connected with the boot trade. Resolutions were passed sympathising with the operatives and urging the employers to come to a speedy settlement. The Executive Committee of the Boot Manufacturers' Association are now participating with the man's Union about the preliminary arrangements for a conference.

QUEENSLAND.

BRISBANE, TUESDAY.

Petitions from various parts of the colony, bearing between 5000 and 6000 signatures, were presented to the Premier yesterday, praying for the reprieve of M'Neill and Williams, who were condemned to death for murder. A special meeting of the Executive was held this morning to consider the matter, when it was decided that the law should be allowed to take its course, and the two men will be executed on the 20th instant.

of the steamer Duke of Argyle yesterday, and was picked up dead.

In the Supreme Court to-day, a coloured man named Hall, who recently shot his wife in the head, and then attempted to commit suicide, was tried for attempted murder, and was found guilty. Sentence was deferred.

Strange complaints have lately been made of an inferior quality of kerosene imported into the colony. Yesterday 1000 cases bearing a first-class brand were condemned, being found to be very inferior.

The steamer Duke of Argyle, which sailed for London to-day, took 5664 bales of wool, this being the largest single shipment which has ever left Brisbane.

A young man named Alfred Noble died at the Belfast Hotel, this afternoon, from the effects of an overdose of chloroform, which he had taken to alleviate a severe attack of diarrhœa. Deceased was discovered in a comatose state. Medical assistance was at once procured, and he was with great difficulty aroused, but he died a few hours afterwards. Noble was a surveyor and architect, and had recently been in business in Bourke, New South Wales. His parents reside at Geelong.

CAIRNS, TUESDAY.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

ADELAIDE, TUESDAY.

Mr. Scott says that 12 of the guaranteeing promoters have definitely decided to hold the Jubilee Exhibition at Adelaide in June, 1887. It was resolved that the South Australians shall alone have the management of it. The promoters represent the leading wealthy men of this city, and they are confident that the venture will result in a surplus, which will be used to establish a technological school. Charges will be made as usual for space, and the proceeds will furnish the prizes to be awarded to the exhibitors, and the Government are to be asked to erect an Exhibition Hall at a cost of £20,000, which could be used for the Jubilee Exhibition.

An insolvent named Maurice Hayes to-day had the hearing of his case suspended sine die, he having been adjudged guilty of forgery, conspiracy, perjury, and fraud. He will be criminally prosecuted for perjury.

The police have received information from the constable stationed at Queenscliffe, on Kangaroo Island, that the missing fishermen, Holmes and Jensen, had been seen at the American River by a man named Andrew Gilbert, who had conversed with them. They were then awaiting a favourable wind to return to Port Adelaide.

Frank Bell, William Mairo, John Prevell, and Patrick Hennessey, the young man who took a prominent part in the disturbance that was created outside the house of Charles Parker at East Adelaide several weeks ago, during the wedding festivities, were committed for trial at the City Police Court to-day on a charge of stabbing Parker, who went out to expostulate with them.

A considerable quantity of tobacco from the Northern Territory has been received by the Minister of Justice. The leaf has been raised too near the sea coast, but it is a good smoking tobacco, and there is no doubt that considerable quantities of it can be grown.

The Hon. Thomas English, M.L.C., a colonist of over 80 years, is dying from the effects of an apoplectic seizure to-day. He was a member, formerly, of the well-known firm of contractors, Messrs. English and Brown, which of late years has been carrying on business as architects, the firm being Messrs. English and Howard. He has occupied the position of Mayor of Adelaide, and has been a member of the Legislative Assembly for several years, and latterly has been a member of the Legislative Council.

TASMANIA.

HOBART, TUESDAY.

The Ministry have considered the tenders for the construction of the Derwent Valley railway, but the lowest was not accepted, as allowance had not been made for certain ironwork, which is estimated to cost £1000. The second lowest tender was not accepted for the same reason; but the third tender—that of Mr. J. Pettingham, of Footscray, for £86,011—was accepted.

The steamer Hilarion arrived here yesterday from London with 127 immigrants, 40 passengers for Tasmania, and also passengers for Sydney and Melbourne. The vessel left London on October 25.

Rain fell continuously here all day yesterday, and it is expected to be of great service in the southern part of the island.

The Council of Education has declared the results of the examination to-day for the Tasmanian scholarships and degrees of Associate of Arts. For the scholarships, out of six candidates the following were qualified:—James Harcourt Smith, Launceston; Frederick Charles, Launceston; R. S. Stephenson, and E. A. Lampriell. On the 30th instant, at Hobart, two scholarships will be awarded, being the first two for the Associate of Arts. W. T. Price, J. T. Wilson, James R. M. Roche, Beatrice M. Hudspeth, Walter J. Johnstone, Charles Kruse Kaun, Reginald M. Ritchie, Harold Hale, and Caroline Finnaihorn had their degrees conferred to-day, and the scholarships will be awarded publicly to-morrow by the Bishop of Tasmania, in the Town Hall. The Board of Education exhibition will be bestowed at the same time and place.

MINING INTELLIGENCE.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

TEMORA, TUESDAY.

The long-pending dispute between Marshall v. R. O'Connor as to the crushing of the Evening Star Reef, Schastopol, has been finally settled out of court, and the crushing commenced to-day at the Marshall battery. Judge Backhouse has heard the appeal case of Farrell and Marshall v. the Morning Star Company. Mr. Coleman appeared for the appellant, and Mr. O'Donnell for the respondent. Judgment was reserved.

The manager of the following companies at Ballarat East reports as follows:—"Normanby Company: Shaft is now thoroughly cleaned out and repaired, and sinking will be started early this week. Have found rich gold during going south, in good order, which are of great value for opening up the mine. Last Chance Tribute Company: Have extended inset 24 feet in west, distance from shaft 234 feet. The country we are in now is sinking very promising, having gone through big gold, there are several flat veins of quartz in face of drive carrying gold, which shows we are close to the lode, and may break into same any minute. No. 3 shaft has been cleaned up, and mines sunk 20 feet, and timbered. North Wesh Harp Company: Stoping north and south on western lode; shaft at last reported, lady and Co., on same lode, are raising payable stone; Crishtaloping Queen lode; Thomas and Co., on same, are in large body of stone; Richards and Co., on Indiana, have drained their 100 level; will clean up on Saturday. East Chance Extended Company are continuing to drive north in Clarke's stone, country favourable; tenders will be called during the week for extending same 200 further; machinery in good order."

The mining manager of the Prince of Wales and Old Poverty Company, No Liability, Tarragalla, reports under date December 13:—"The shaft has been sunk 10 feet for the week, 22 feet for the fortnight; total depth, 236 feet. Machinery working well."

The first general meeting of shareholders in the Lubra Silver-mining Company, No Liability, was held at the Exchange yesterday afternoon. Thirty-two shareholders were present, representing 274 shares out of a total of 2000. Being a first general meeting it has no minutes, no proxies were received. Mr. O. F. Clayton was voted to the chair, and read the last report from the mine, which showed that two men had raised last week ore lots of ore, valued at £530. He then called upon Mr. Nicholls, from Melbourne, to read the report from the Sydney directors, which was unanimously adopted. The report from the Melbourne meeting, held on the 2nd December, was received as read, and, on the motion of Mr. James Wilson, seconded by Mr. W. Harrison, it was agreed that the meeting confirmed the action and agreed with the proceedings of that meeting, including the appointment of seven directors, the adoption of the rules of the company, appointment of manager and other officers. It was stated that possession of the mine would be taken at once, and work started on behalf of the company. The number of prospectors' shares taken in Sydney is at present over 500.

NEWCASTLE, TUESDAY.

The Minister for Justice arrived here this morning, and was met by Messrs. Fletcher and Ellis and the Mayor. The Minister highly approves of the proposed site near the Hospital for the lunatic for the new courthouse, also of the present courthouse being converted into a town-hall.

The weekly export of coal amounted to 31,647 tons.

The sale of the Wallsend gates and booths for the Christmas races realised £562 10s.

The weather is still close.

NARRABRI, TUESDAY.

The Minister for Public Works is expected to arrive here during the week, and a deputation has been appointed to wait on him with respect to bringing the Moree railway line through this town, instead of taking it two miles away as surveyed. They will also interview him with regard to the opening of a road from Narrabri to Bingara.

A number of sheep and cattle are travelling up towards the Namoi for sale.

The weather is beautifully cool and fine.

MOUNT HOPE, TUESDAY.

At a meeting of the inhabitants of South Mount Hope, which was held on Saturday, the following resolutions were passed:—"1. That the Minister for Justice be requested to order the withdrawal of the summonses issued against the woodcutters for selling timber without license, for the following reasons: (a) The timber has been cut within the boundaries of the common; (b) when ordered to procure license they did so; (c) the frequent adjournment of the cases from fortnight to fortnight has caused considerable loss not only to the defendants, but to the entire public; (d) the defendants are prevented from leaving here till the Police Magistrate deems it to attend. 2. That it is necessary to have a local magistrate appointed, as no reliance can be placed on the Police Magistrate's attendance. 3. That the members for the district and other members of Parliament be requested use their influence in having magistrates appointed for Mount Hope."

There has been no inquiry yet into the burning of the Mount Hope Hotel, which occurred on Saturday night, as there is no magistrate to be got nearer than 70 miles, as the affair—which appears on the face of it to be an act of incendiarism—still remains a mystery.

FORBES, TUESDAY.

Fine rain commenced here on Saturday night, continued all day on Sunday, and it was showery yesterday. The register up to the present shows that 1½ inch has fallen, and still there is a lot more rain hanging about.

There is a great deal of sickness here, it being particularly prevalent amongst the children, the most of whom are suffering from whooping-cough.

KEMPSEY, TUESDAY.

The cross in this district look magnificent; but still there is a desire for more rain. The crops on the stations in the Macleay district never was in better condition.

BATHURST, TUESDAY.

An inquest was held to-day, at the hospital, before Mr. D. Lee, P.M., coroner, on the body of one Bartholomew Blackham, who was admitted to that establishment on Sunday, and died on Monday. At the time of his admission he was in a most filthy and neglected state, and was labouring under a disease which, from the evidence, it appeared that he had been fighting, and his body showed the marks of several injuries, and the evidence indicated that his death was due to concussion of the brain. A man, with whom deceased was said to have been fighting, was in attendance to give evidence, but when called upon he did not appear, and the inquiry was adjourned in order that the person might be produced. On the deceased was found three deposit receipts on Melbourne banks, one for £185 18s. 6d. and two for £100 each, besides £2 14s. in cash.

TEMORA, TUESDAY.

There has been a good rainfall here during the last two days: 76 points were registered on Monday, and 27 points to-day.

ALBURY, TUESDAY.

The Hon. A. Stuart and family arrived here by special train this evening, en route for Melbourne. They remain here to-night, and will leave to-morrow morning for the Victorian capital.

BRADWOOD, TUESDAY.

The Quarter Sessions were held here to-day before Judge M'Farland, but the cases were not of any public importance.

The weather continues very cool and dry.

LISMORE, TUESDAY.

Three hundred acres of land were selected this week.

The schedule of prizes for the Lismore Agricultural Society's show, to be held on 27th January next, is now issued, and as the season is fairly propitious the show will doubtless prove a success.

The thermometer registered 100 degrees in the shade yesterday, but light rain and a thunderstorm from the north-west have cooled the air to-day. The country looks well, but heavy rain is wanted to set the crops, &c., going.

GOULBURN, TUESDAY.

A meeting was held this evening to consider the desirableness of forming a public recreation and street ground. The Mayor presided. Mr. S. H. Beaver brought forward figures showing that the ground would pay well if a company were formed, and it was ultimately decided to form one, and a provisional directorate was elected.

An inquest in reference to the death of the late Rev. Mr. Lamb, held at 4.30 this afternoon, at Main's Hotel, when a large amount of evidence was taken, but no final verdict was thrown upon the subject. The jury returned an open verdict, their finding being that the fire originated in the western end of the building known as Jordan's stables, and that there was no evidence to show as to how the same originated.

The weather has been very cool during the last two days, and some nice showers fell yesterday.

WAGGA WAGGA, TUESDAY.

The man Killen, who was committed for trial for the murder at Pedro-Mile Creek, near Narrandera, in shooting the sitings at Wagga Wagga Circuit Court in past term. There is nothing in his appearance to indicate sinister, and his demeanour is the same as that of other prisoners.

The Land Inquiry Court resumed its sittings this morning. The list is now more than half concluded.

A meeting of the Wagga Wagga representatives of the fire insurance companies was held yesterday for the purpose of recommending a fire-police to the local Fire Brigades Board. It was decided to recommend for the appointment Mr. D. Copland.

Rain fell here late last night. It is now dull, and more threatens. Nearly 70 points have fallen altogether.

AMUSEMENTS.

VOGRICH CONCERT.

The enjoyable concerts given by Herr and Madame Vogrich in the Freemasons' Hall were concluded last night by an entertainment worthy of the series. The concert was very well attended. Among the instrumental numbers were two pianoforte solos by Herr Vogrich. The first of these was an arrangement by the player of the old French ballad called "The Queen's Falconer," in which are embodied suggestions of the chase and the falconer's love for the Queen. It was a bold and powerful piece of work, in which the musician displayed great familiarity. In a bracketed number was included that charming union of sort, sweet cadenza with crisp and sparkling finish, known as Liszt's transcription of Rossini's "La Regata Veneziana." The other selection was preceded under a description which conveyed the suggestion that Herr Vogrich had undertaken a transcription of Schubert's great serenade. This was not the case, however, as the first subject of the arrangement proved to be Schubert's composition, Mr. de Willimoff played in an excellent manner Wieniawski's beautiful "Legende." The other instrumental selections were three concerted numbers. The first of these consisted of the first three movements—allegro, andante, and scherzo—from Schumann's Quintuor, the finale being omitted. The performers were Herr Vogrich, M. de Willimoff, Mr. Allpress, Herr Guntrip, and a gentleman amateur. The work was attacked in splendid style, and the music throughout was admirably developed. Haydn's "Kaiser" variations on the grand American Hymn formed the subject of a string quartette by M. de Willimoff, Mr. Allpress, Herr Guntrip, and the amateur assistant. This was not satisfactorily performed, but the audience seemed to be in a state of mind to endure anything for love of the theme, and the players were actually recalled. Hummel's grand Septuor, which by the way was played at the opening concert, was the third of this class of contributions, and its magnificent music was rendered in a most notable manner. The whole four movements were performed, viz., adagio, scherzo, andante with variations, and finale. Among the most effective passages was the lously waltz-like movement which forms part of the scherzo, and also the pianoforte work in the andante. The distribution of instruments was as follows:—Pianoforte, Herr Vogrich; viola, Mr. Allpress; 'cello, Herr Guntrip; bass, Herr Draeger; flute, Dr. Hankins; clarinet, Mr. Cooper; and corset, Mr. M'Mahon. Madame Vogrich sang very successfully in three numbers, beginning with the admired song "Thou only I love," by the versatile capellmaster of Hamburg, Franz Abt. The ballad from Verdi's "Sicilian Vespers" was admirably sung, and Madame Vogrich was recalled to acknowledge merited applause. The most attractive of the vocal numbers was, however, a Swiss song by Madame Vogrich, sung with pluck and strong concentrement. It is a very pretty musical setting of Goethe's "Swiss Song," beginning, "Hoch auf den Berge." The song was sung in the original language. The music was full of brightness and tenderness, and redolent of mountain air and mountain echoes and the pretty strains of the Swiss shepherds. It was rendered in an appropriately sympathetic spirit, and may be regarded as a sterling work. The Hummel selection, already referred to, was the concluding number, and with its grand music still running in the memory, the audience were not slow in expressing regret that the series had come to an end.

ENGLISH ELEVEN v. AUSTRALIAN ELEVEN.

ADELAIDE, TUESDAY.

The cricket match was continued this morning, and owing to the bad state of the wickets during the time the Australians were batting, the game was soon decided in favour of the Englishmen by six wickets. After the match was over the teams were entertained in the pavilion by the South Australian Cricket Association. Mr. S. T. Smith, M.L.A., proposed the health of the two eleven, and Ulyett responded for the Englishmen. Murdoch, in replying for the Australian Eleven, spoke at some length, and said that he regretted the misunderstanding which had arisen to prevent a second meeting of his team and the Englishmen. They had made what they thought was a very good offer, and as the Englishmen would not accept their terms it was useless to hope for a second match. The match was continued at 11.15 a.m., Giffen (49) and Cooper (3) continuing their innings, to the bowling of Peel and Barnes. The wicket was a good deal damaged by the rain, and both the bowlers bumped badly. After five maidens, Giffen got Barnes to the leg for a single; but the batsmen were considerably uncomfortable owing to the bad state of the wicket. A single and a double were scored to Giffen, after which Cooper astonished the spectators by driving Peel all along the carpet for 3. Another spell of dull play ensued, and then Cooper got under a bumpy one and was caught at point, 5-6-160. Bonner followed, and saw Giffen play a bumpy one from Peel into Shrewsbury's hands at point, 0-42-169. Palmer came next, and Bonner hit Barnes to the on for a double. After making a single to the off, the giant lifted Barnes skywards, and the ball falling between the long fields, two were run. In Barnes' next over Bonner cut him nicely for 3. Another big lift by the giant brought 2, and then a bumpy one hit Palmer on the shoulder, bounced up over his head, and fell on to the wicket. 7-0-171. Alexander was the next man, when Bonner cut Peel for 2 and Barnes for 4. In Peel's next he lifted one to the off for 2; but immediately afterwards he skied one and was caught. 8-1-182. A couple of singles to Alexander were the next items, but at 184 Alexander hit Barnes to the off for 4, and to the on for a double and single. In Peel's next over Alexander went out to hit Peel, and was easily stumped (9-10-191); and as Bannerman was not well enough to bat, the innings was over at 10 minutes past 12 o'clock. Wanting 57 to win, the Englishmen began their second innings with Flowers and Scotton. Palmer opened the bowling from the south end, and was hit to leg for 2 by Flowers. Flowers also got Boyle to the leg for a double, and the latter hit Palmer to the off for 2. In Palmer's next over Flowers beautifully caught at point by Scott. 1-1-0. Shrewsbury came next, and three byes were scored off Palmer, which brought the figures up to 10; and Scotton got Palmer to the leg for a double. Maidens from each end followed, but in Boyle's next over Shrewsbury cut the ball for a single. Scotton then let out out at Boyle, but the ball just went within reach of Scott, who effected a grand catch. 2-2-10. Barnes was next man, and Shrewsbury hit Palmer to the leg for 3. Barnes cut Boyle for 2 and Palmer for 3. Shrewsbury cut Palmer for 4, and then he hit Boyle to long-off, where Scott missed a comparatively easy chance. A splendid cut by Shrewsbury off Boyle gave him 4, a double to leg by Barnes off Palmer, and to the leg by Shrewsbury off Boyle, brought up 40 on the board. Giffen relieved Boyle, and Barnes skied him to the square leg. Murdoch made a great effort to get to the catch, but could not quite reach it. The next ball was hit to the pavilion for 4, and the last of the overs to leg for 1. The cricket had improved very much since the game began, and was now playing very well. A pretty cut for 4 by Shrewsbury brought up 50, and after a single by Barnes, Shrewsbury drove Giffen to the scoring board for 3, and Barnes hit the same bowler to the press box for 4. Another double to Barnes in the same over was increased to 3 by an overthrow, making 10 of the over, and in Palmer's next, Shrewsbury hit Palmer to the off for 2. At 25 minutes past 1 (which the Englishmen had won the match by eight wickets. Appended are the scores:—

THE TURF.

Sporting matters have been somewhat quiet during the last three days, and little of importance has been done. Some useful work was done at Randwick yesterday morning. Highland Mary and The Flier were rattled along for nearly a mile, when The Flier was in hopeless difficulties, and The Jay saw the silly home at the end of a very good gallop. Bunworth did a strong half-mile and a quarter, while Wilkiroo and Impulse had a deal more to say than Sarabrada over a fast run over round. Helmsman gave evidence that he is returning to his best form by making off Eaglejile in a smart gallop, and Friendship put in a fairoon round alone. Wallangra was sent nearly two miles, most of the way at a solid pace. Lord Elgin, who has vastly improved and continues sound, went particularly well. He is not only a good-looking horse but one of the best bred in the land, and if the weather holds out successfully battle against the infirmity which has so often interfered with his work, he will yet prove himself to be a great horse. Pope and Prodigal went nicely, and Wolseley, California, and the others of the strong old party fair work. Good Luck, Fado, and Sam ran a smart half-mile, and Rapid out lured of the Lake were sent along for a serviceable mile and a-quarter. Trams showed to advantage early in the morning, but Intentio pulled up a little lame.

CRICKET.

The match between the players of England and the Australian Eleven at Adelaide has resulted in a signal victory for the Englishmen, but the severeness of the defeat is in some measure mitigated owing to the absence of Spofforth, the unspared bowler of Australia. Midwinter was also an absentee, but his loss was nothing compared with that of the "demon bowler," for the former can by no stretch of imagination be considered other than a "half-cooked," and he is a better bowler than either Cooper or Bonner, and the Australians suffered therefore by his defection. Against this it can be fairly said the English victory was of a most decisive character, inasmuch as the visitors won by eight wickets, notwithstanding the fact that they lost the toss, and had all through the worst of the wet. If A. Bannerman had been able to bat in the second innings of the Australians it might have made the victory less decisive; but that batsman's form of late is not such as would suggest a slaughter of the English bowling. The contest cannot be deemed in the light of a trial of strength between England and Australia. Shaw's team no more represents the pick of England then Murdoch's men can in said to be a representative eleven of Australia. If the best eleven the colonies can send into the field were selected to-morrow, not more than six of the Australian eleven would find a place in it, and there are many who think that from New South Wales, Victoria, and South Australia an eleven can be handed together which, with practice, would be able to hold its own with Murdoch and his comrades. The late match is remarkable for the two grand innings played by M'Donnell, why by his performance has endorsed the opinion of the English press after the late Australian tour, awarding him the premier position among the batsmen of the Australian Eleven; and the superb display of Barnes, who made the highest individual score of the match in the first innings, and carried out his bat in the second. Blackham on one side and Scott on the other are worthy of praise for their masterious batting, while Ulyett's dashing contribution in the first innings must not be passed over. The fielding on both sides appears to have been somewhat erratic, a number of catches being missed, and Blackham behind the sticks was particularly out of form. The umpires apparently had to exercise their functions, as there are an unusual number of cases of "leg before wicket." Both teams leave to-day by steamer for Melbourne. There is no prospect of a further meeting of the two eleven, as the Englishmen have filled all their available dates. On January 1 and the following days the visitors will oppose eleven of Victoria on the Melbourne Cricket Ground. Their next appearance here will be on January 29th, 30th, and 31st, when they will oppose a New South Wales eleven. Before playing at Melbourne they will visit Maryborough, Sandhurst, Ballarat, and Bendigo, after which they will play at several of the towns in the south coast district.

The New South Wales representatives for the forthcoming International Cricket Match, to take place against Victoria on the Melbourne Cricket Ground on Boxing Day and the following days, leave for Melbourne by express train this afternoon at 4.55. The following are the names of the thirteen from which the actual eleven will be chosen:—H. Allen, C. Bannerman, A. Bannerman, F. Downes, T. Garrett, E. Evans, H. Hendleson, S. Jones, P. Marr, W. Murdoch, H. Moses, O'Hanlon, Pope, Murdoch and A. Bannerman leave Adelaide to-day for Melbourne. If the injury which the latter received to his hand in the match against the Englishmen at Adelaide prevents his taking part in the encounter, it is probable that Baxter may be asked to fill the vacant place in the thirteen. Mr. C. Bond will accompany the team as manager. Mr. Jonnie Swift (the inspire), and Mr. S. W. Daniel (scorer), will leave by the same train. Owing to the unfavorable absence of the indomitable Spofforth and that of Massie, who is out of practice, the New South Wales team is much weakened. But the prospects of victory were quite as gloomy when our team left for Melbourne 12 months ago, and it will be remembered that after having all the wind of the luck, our team were beaten only after a hard stubborn fight. The formidable array of talent on the Victorian side will not always our champions who, despite the opinion of the opponently, will offer a hard fight to the enemy. It is wise on the part of our eleven to send the team over a week before the match, for it takes some time before the players can become accustomed to the faster turf at Melbourne. Messrs. Garrett, Moses, and Jones have been deputed to make the selection of the final eleven.

The Athenian entertainment held under the auspices of the Carlton Cricket Club last evening, at the New Masonic Hall, was a success in every way. The programme was of a varied and interesting character, the vocalisation was good. The efforts of Messrs. J. H. Myers, S. Jones, and W. Marshall, elicited the plaudits of a numerous audience, and the accompaniments of Mr. W. Marshall on piano, and Mr. E. W. Bramble contributed in a large measure to the enjoyment of the evening.

The following correspondent telegraphs that the Englishmen have declined to accept the Australian eleven's proposal to play another match. They, however, offered the Adelaideans £50 per man to play, which has been refused. The Englishmen will probably meet another team of Australians, which will include Garvin, and probably W. Gilbo.

Eleven boxers, visited Gladesville on Saturday, and had rather the worst of it game with the Hospital eleven. The visitors made 141 runs and the home team had scored wickets for 110. For the Hospital Dennis, Langley, Gulley, Magrath, Bullivant, and Mosley made a good show. For the visitors Cooper played the best innings of the match for 41, and Bennett, though not in the pink of condition for running, made 38 by good hitting.

AQUATICS.

The Metropolitan Rowing Club has a race for sculling in skiffs, the course, 1½ mile, to be rowed on the Parramatta River, on Saturday next. The prize, a very handsome one, is presented by a member. A steamer for members and friends will leave the clubhouse, Dawes Point, at 1.45 p.m. The handicap is:—W. G. Hirst, 60½; G. Smith, 45 5-8; W. J. Cotterill, 44½; C. E. Williams, 44½; F. J. Hall, 39½; J. Denny, G. Mossop, and F. J. Newell, 38½; and D. Hitchcock, 34 5-8. Visitors will be afforded a chance of seeing Hanlan and Clifford doing their practice. The former is rowing from the Mort St. C. branch.

A committee meeting of the New South Wales National Regatta held last night at the Sydney Club House, there was a full attendance, and Mr. P. J. Clarke presided. The balance-sheet of last year's regatta was presented by the treasurer. This showed that there was a surplus standing to the credit account of £89 2s. 8d. The new rules were submitted and approved. The programme, which is now complete, is as follows:—Sculling, 1 mile, for the Hanlan Challenge Shield, to present a prize was accepted, and the committee decided to award it to the winning boat in the senior fours. The meeting then adjourned.

THE ASCOTTIC CHAMPIONSHIP.

No movement has as yet been made on either side towards reviving the match between Clifford and Beach. It is considered, however, that the arrangement of another match would be the shortest way out of the difficulty. Clifford is willing to make another match, and on the other side Mr. Beckle is ready to stake Clifford's party any sight that he chooses. There now remains for the time-keeper and under the same conditions as the one that has fallen through. Under these circumstances, there should be no difficulty in making an arrangement, and thereby removing the difficulty which having arisen in an overnight, is declared by Mr. Beckle himself. As to the amount to which the forfeiture covers the stakes, it has transpired that the articles of agreement leave it open for the defaulter to inflict that little of disappointment. Since the stakes were claimed, Mr. Beckle has been furnished with a copy of the articles, and it appears that in the clause prevailing for forfeiture in the event of non-fulfilment of the specified conditions the terms extend only to the money paid into the hands of the stakeholder, and it is not stated that the party of champion of the world is also forfeited, or was provided for, in example, the Hanlan-Hosmer agreement. This point will have an important bearing on the whole situation. There is also a question as to the strict adherence to the articles observed by Clifford's party throughout, in connection with the payment of the Cup, and altogether, if technicalities are looked for, the matter promises to be involved, that it will be much the best Cup to keep the surface by a decisive and definite action in regard to the arrangement of another match. It is understood that Hanlan is desirous of coming to his two matches with Clifford, and that he is approaching Clifford's party with that object in view.

SYDNEY HOMING PIGEON SOCIETY.

The attendance of racers for this society was enlarged another stage by the holding of a race on Saturday last from Goulburn. At the opening of the season in September last, Mr. R. L. Tooth, of the Swiss, Darling Point, handed over to the society a beautiful silver vase to be raced for as the committee might deem fit. It was then decided that the race should be open to members only, and flown as above. Considerably over 30 entries were made, and of this number 20 birds were liberated on Saturday. To course an average flight, the distance being considerable, the birds had to be dispatched on Friday night. Mr. Hogan has had great experience in matters of this kind, undertook the duties of mustaine and starter. He liberated the birds at 6.45 p.m. reporting the weather favorable, the weather was fine, clear, and without a breath of air, with everything in favour of a good fly; but those who remember the state of the Goulburn road will not be surprised to hear that birds give a very different account, as here though it was late the heat was intense and a heavy breeze was blowing. To these latter facts are attributed the non-arrival of ordinary performers. Below, will course the result:—1, J. Taylor's Dove, 165 miles, 145 yards—24½ minutes—average number of yards per minute, 905. 2, J. Taylor's Swallow, 165 miles 143 yards—24½ minutes—average number of yards per minute, 905. 3, S. Hodgson's, No. 9, 165 miles 11 yards—26 minutes—average number of yards per minute, 895. Nevertheless the slow rate of speed attained, Mr. Tooth's efforts to further the interests of the society may be considered fairly successful, as the competition was keen, and the interest sustained from the time of entry until the declaration of the result, and the outcome was and all were loud in their praises of Mr. Tooth's liberality.

LUMINOUS PAINT.—Luminous paint continues to make slow but steady progress in its application. Numerous useful purposes are found for it, and applications may be mentioned tapes for field use at night by the Royal Engineers department. Starting from a point towards the first the tapes form a trail of luminous tape on their track, and on reaching a given point they mark the contour of the earthworks to be executed by the same means, leaving out the tape as they return towards the camp. The working party then follow the outward trail, execute the work, and return to camp without having discovered a single ray of light to the enemy. The German War Office authorities have experimented with the paint for purposes of night attack, and Lieutenant Dappe, of the Belgian School of Gunnery, is investigating its merits in the same direction. Our own Government are also using painted glasses, or Aladdin's lamps, as they are called, for internal boiler inspections. General Lord Wolseley also took with him a luminous compass in the Nile expedition. It was also been applied in some large establishments to the fire buckets, which are thus easily found in the dark. The latest application of luminous paint is that of a South-Eastern Railway third-class carriage, the interior of which has been lined with the paint on the backed glass.

CHRISTMAS TOYS. CHRISTMAS DOLLS. CHRISTMAS BOOKS.

All three useful in their way, and all three possessing unusual attractions at this time of the year.

The Toys and the Dolls keep the children quiet, whilst those of larger growth read the Books.

THE CHRISTMAS BOOKS are this year excellent, a good choice from a good assortment. Something to suit the most fastidious. Something to please all.

CHRISTMAS TOYS, wonderful in their variety, amusing and diverting in their character.

ANIMAL TOYS, BIRD TOYS, FISH TOYS, REPTILE TOYS, GEOGRAPHICAL TOYS, SCIENTIFIC TOYS, CLOCKWORK TOYS. Toys for little children, Toys for big boys and girls.

OUR SIXPENNY CRICKET BAT cannot be bought elsewhere under one shilling.

THE BRICKS! THE BRICKS! THE BRICKS! enabling every boy whose name is Jack to say, with very little trouble and a great deal of truth, "THIS IS THE HOUSE THAT JACK BUILT," and boys of other names to equally assert, if less poetical, THE BRICKS! THE BRICKS! THE BRICKS! are only NINEPENCE PER BOX.

CHRISTMAS DOLLS. The family of dolls is getting smaller and smaller day by day, so many have eloped, so many have disappeared, and yet there are, up till now, plenty left for all. "THE DOLLS ARE REALLY BEAUTIFUL!" is the remark of all as they pass that way.

They are of WAX WOOD CHINA and RAG. And their good qualities are too numerous to enumerate.

The only satisfactory plan is to BRING THE CHILDREN TO SEE THEM.

SUTTON FOREST, the Charming Country Retreat District.

That delightfully-situated two-storied Family Residence HAWTHORNE, formerly the property of F. D. Badgery, Esq., together with 56½ ACRES of AVAILABLE LAND, only 3 miles from the MOSS VALE RAILWAY STATION, and adjoining the late VICE-REGAL RESIDENCE of His EXCELLENCY LORD AUGUSTUS LOFTUS.

The GROUNDS (56½ acres) are partially laid out into orchard, garden, and cleared paddocks.

TERMS VERY LIBERAL.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions to sell by public auction, at the Rooms Pitt-street, on FRIDAY, 19th DECEMBER, at 11 o'clock,

HAWTHORNE, a delightfully situated country retreat, in the charming and healthful district of SUTTON FOREST, partially furnished if purchaser desires it. Only 3 miles by a good road from the MOSS VALE RAILWAY STATION, and adjoining the POST and TELEGRAPH OFFICES of SUTTON FOREST.

It is substantially built of brick, has wide verandah and balcony, and contains 11 rooms, with detached kitchen, pantry, storeroom, laundry, servants' rooms, and stables.

The grounds, comprising an area of 56½ ACRES by measurement, are very picturesque and attractive; portion (about 2 acres) is planted as orchard, with the best assortment of English fruit trees from VICTORIA and TASMANIA, all bearing profusely.

Other portions are cleared paddocks thickly grassed, and the residue is pretty, undulating, park-like land, on which all the LARGE NATIVE EVERGREEN TREES have been preserved.

The position is fairly elevated, and yet protected from the south and west winds.

HAWTHORNE as a country retreat, with its park-like grounds (56½ ACRES), can specially be recommended to those desirous of securing an improved small estate in this the most attractive, salubrious, and healthful climate in all NEW SOUTH WALES.

Sutton Forest stands on an elevation of upwards of 2000 feet above the sea level, and, without exception, is the most popular and highly improved district on the Southern Railway.

The property has large frontage to the MAIN ARGYLE-ROAD, which is one of the best kept country roads in the colony, and many beautiful drives can be enjoyed on all sides of this estate, including that delightful one to the FITZROY FALLS, which are 12 miles distant.

INSPECTION INVITED.

TERMS, LIBERAL.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, on FRIDAY, 19th December, at 11 o'clock,

All that valuable corner block of land, having 40 feet frontage to DERWENT-STREET and 126 feet frontage to MITCHELL-STREET, with a lane at the rear, on which are erected, of brick on stone foundation, the following premises:—

CORNER SHOP and DWELLING, containing 5 apartments, gas and city water laid on.

DERWENT-STREET.—A COTTAGE, with verandah in front, and containing hall, 4 rooms, kitchen, washhouse, and coal-house.

MITCHELL-STREET.—A large BLACKSMITH'S SHOP, of iron.

 The above block of property occupies one of the best positions on Glebe heights, handy to the main Glebe-road, along which the trams and omnibus is run at short intervals during the day.

TITLE, LEASEHOLD, having about 71 years to run.

Terms at sale.

OUR FIRST SALE of the NEW YEAR will be for the HAYMARKET PERMANENT LAND, BUILDING AND INVESTMENT CO., Limited, who always SELL OUT THEIR SUBDIVISIONS at prices which give buyers an opportunity to re-sell at a good profit.

On the GROUND, at 3 p.m., SATURDAY, 10th JANUARY, 1885, under the popular terms of £5 per Lot deposit, balance 4s per week each £100; Purchasers may pay more than this, or pay off the whole at any time.

BOWEN PARK, BOWEN PARK.

KOGARAH TOWNSHIP.

Almost at the Station Gates, and in the centre of this GROWING Suburb.

BOWEN PARK is 30½ ACRES in extent.

BOWEN PARK fronts the two main roads in Kogarah, viz., Kogarah and Rocky Point Roads.

BOWEN PARK is on the highest point in Kogarah, 100 feet above the station, and slopes gently to the east.

BOWEN PARK is of rich, loamy soil, no rocks, gullies, or swamps, but every inch good available land.

BOWEN PARK has all 66 feet streets, and lanes at rear of business sites.

BOWEN PARK is surrounded by the various churches, stores, business premises, hotels, bank, the Public Schools, and residences of Messrs. Moore, Carruthers, Bowen, South, Hermann, and others.

BOWEN PARK commands the best view to be obtained in the whole district, comprising a panoramic of the Ocean Bay, George's River, with the meadows at its base, and the distant ranges of Port Hacking.

SALE DAY. SATURDAY, 17th JANUARY, 1885.

BOWEN PARK is only about 50 yards from the Railway Line and about 200 yards from the Station. Coaches for Sandringham and Wonlora pass it on the main roads every hour.

BOWEN PARK is within 440 yards of Kogarah Bay, where the charming residences of Messrs. Hunt, Ennis, Moyne, Cura, and others, with tastefully laid-out grounds, fringe the water's edge. The fishing stations of Messrs. Jones, Emerson, Smith, and others are also located on this bay.

BOWEN PARK is within half a mile of Lady Robinson Beach—the grandest beach in the world.

BOWEN PARK is well known as the old Kogarah racecourse, and on portion of it are the old Half-way House and the Roman Catholic Chapel (soon to be replaced by a substantial edifice).

KOGARAH is only 6¾ miles from Sydney.

KOGARAH has twelve trains daily, and time of journey twenty minutes.

SALE DAY, 17th JANUARY, 1885.

The returns for the ILLAWARRA LINE are unprecedented, and it is the first line in the colony that from its opening HAS RETURNED A PROFIT.

BUILDING OPERATIONS are going on apace at Kogarah, as testified by the new houses being erected for Mr. Chubb, the new house and timber yard of Mr. Hudson, the villa residence of S. Crawford, Esq., J.P., and many others, either commenced or approaching completion. Fully thirty houses in course of erection on land adjacent to the park.

The BANK OF AUSTRALASIA has opened a branch at Kogarah, near Bowen Park.

The KOGARAH SCHOOL OF ARTS is shortly to be erected within a stone's throw of Bowen Park.

All lots in Bowen Park laid out in large blocks with every foresight.

BOWEN PARK lies between Bay View Park and the Kogarah township estate, and admittedly is superior to either in elevation and as a natural site.

There can be no more land sales in Kogarah proper when Bowen Park is cleared off, as it is the last of the popular Kogarah Hill, the site of the town.

SALE DAY, SATURDAY, 17th JANUARY, 1885.

THE DISCOVERY of COAL at HEATHCOTE will render George's River a first-class Shipping Port and Business Centre.

Orchards and Gardens (flower and vegetable) thrive most luxuriantly at Kogarah in all seasons.

FOR PROOF OF ALL THE ABOVE just take a trip to BOWEN PARK, and through KOGARAH, and judge for yourselves.

Inspection cordially invited as the land will bear inspection.

DAY OF SALE. DAY OF SALE.

SATURDAY, January 17, 1885.

TITLE, PERFECT FREEHOLD, of which you can satisfy yourself by applying to the Solicitor to the Estate, J. H. Carruthers, Esq., 130, Pitt-street, Sydney.

Terms of Sale:

No. 1.—10 per cent. deposit, balance by equal payments every six months—viz., 6, 12, 18, 24, 30, and 36 months from day of sale, with interest at 6 per cent. added.

No. 2.—15 per cent. deposit, balance at 1, 2, and 3 years, with 6 per cent. interest.

No. 3.—25 per cent. deposit, balance in three years at 6 per cent. interest, or to suit intending buyers for immediate building.

SPECIAL TERMS.

The buyer of any one lot may, on purchasing the two adjoining allotments, pay cash for the allotment he intends to build upon, and receive his deeds therefor, and secure the adjoining lots by paying a deposit of 5 per cent., balance to be paid off in 1, 2, and 3 years, at 6 per cent. These terms enable a purchaser with a limited capital to build his home on his own free land and to secure, by a trifling deposit, a larger area, which is enhanced in value by his building and other improvements.

In order to preserve the beauties of this, the pick of the suburb of Kogarah, the vendors will not permit any shanties to be erected on the estate, and require all buildings to be of a value of at least £200.

For the confidence of intending buyers we beg to state that the vendors are the same as in Bay View Park, lately sold on the ground by us, and the vendors intend to conduct the sale of Bowen Park as in the case of Bay View Park, viz., to allow the buyers themselves to make the bidding, without any puffing or running.

HARDIE and GORMAN have received instructions to sell by public auction at their Rooms, 133, Pitt-street, at 11.30 a.m.

THIS DAY, Wednesday, December 17,

The above-described villa at Newtown.

This little property is of pleasing elevation, exceeding well finished, and immediately available for occupation.

STANMORE.

In an unusually delightful and open situation, on high ground, commanding a north-easterly aspect, and enjoying a beautiful view of the surrounding undulating country.

A MOST COMPLETE RESIDENCE, known as FOLKESTON, in TUPPER-STREET, surrounded by all the accessories of a gentleman's abode, including superior stabling, and about 3 ACRES of CHARMING PLEASURE GROUNDS, all in good order, and presenting an opportunity rarely to be met with of securing what may be termed a country home within the metropolitan area, and especially recommended to the notice of gentlemen requiring a first-class house with a moderate number of good rooms, with provision for additions (when required) at a small outlay.

HARDIE and GORMAN have received instructions from Mrs. N. P. Bayly (who is leaving the neighbourhood) to sell by public auction, at their Rooms, 133, Pitt-street, at 11.30 a.m. THIS DAY, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 17th.

That most perfect and moderate-sized RESIDENCE, distinguished as FOLKESTON, and situate in TUPPER-STREET, STANMORE, and standing in its own finely timbered grounds of about 3 ACRES.

The HOUSE, nicely retired from the road, and approached by a carriage drive, is substantially built of brick, with cemented facings, and fitted throughout with every modern improvement and convenience, contains the the following accommodation:—

ON THE FIRST FLOOR:

5 principal and secondary bedchambers, bathroom, and w.c.

ON THE GROUND FLOOR:

Spacious entrance hall, comfortable dining-room, elegant drawing-room, cosy library or morning-room; also, the usual domestic offices and outhouses; gas and water are laid on. At a convenient remove from the house stands the stabling—a well-arranged department. The entire property is enclosed, and protected from the road by a close-set park fencing, and belted with well-matured forest trees, affords the utmost privacy. The GARDENS and PLEASURE GROUNDS are tastefully disposed and laid out in flower-beds, lawns, shrubbery, and terrace windings, affording sheltered walks in the winter, and deliciously cool and shady retreats in summer. There is also a kitchen garden, and a good grass paddock for the use of horses and cows.

The LAND possesses the extensive frontage of 600 FEET by a depth of 200 FEET, and being situate close to the railway station and tramway, and within a two-mile radius of the city, presents great prospective building advantages, as all the adjacent lands having been absorbed, there would be a ready market, either for building sites or for houses or shops to be erected thereon, and which need not in any way interfere with the present residence. Numerous roads have been made upon adjoining properties, which converge upon this estate, and which would materially assist in its profitable manipulation.

TORRENS' TITLE.

Possession will be given on completion of the purchase. For cards to view apply to HARDIE and GORMAN, Agents, 133, Pitt-street, Sydney.

HARDIE and GORMAN, Auctioneers, 133, Pitt-street.

IMPORTANT SALE.

Owing to the death of the late D. Williams, Esq. (of Messrs. Williams and Murray, Paper Manufacturers), and IN CONFORMITY WITH THE DEED OF PARTNERSHIP,

HARDIE and GORMAN have received instructions to offer for sale by auction, at their Rooms, No. 133, Pitt-street, Sydney, on WEDNESDAY, 14th January next, at 11 o'clock,

THE WHOLE OF THAT MAGNIFICENT and VALUABLE PROPERTY ON WHICH THE SYDNEY PAPER WORKS ARE ERECTED,

Consisting of about Fourteen (14) Acres of Freehold Land, together with all Building Machinery, and other Fixtures thereon; also, THE GOODWILL OF THE BUSINESS.

IT IS PARTICULARLY NOTIFIED TO THE TRADE THAT THERE WILL BE NO INTERRUPTION WHATEVER TO THE USUAL BUSINESS.

The Purchaser shall be required to take at a valuation all paper, rags, and materials for making paper, including chemicals, together with all plant and sundries.

The above valuable property is situated on the George's River, about 22 miles from Sydney, and within six minutes' walk of the Liverpool Railway Station, with which it is connected by a branch line.

Messrs. Williams and Murray have successfully carried on the business of Paper Manufacturers at the above works for a period of nearly 16 years, during which time they have supplied News Printing Paper to all the leading Newspapers in Sydney, Melbourne, Adelaide, Brisbane, and New Zealand. A very large trade is also carried on in Wrapping Papers, and the manufacture of Paper Bags by machinery (upon which there is a Customs duty) The latter part of the business is rapidly increasing.

The Freehold is very valuable, having frontages to both rail and river, and the Machinery, which has been supplied chiefly by that eminent engineering firm, James Bertram and Sons, Edinburgh, is not only of the very best description, but combines all modern improvements, and in this respect is quite equal to the best appointed mills in Great Britain.

The Auctioneers desire to draw particular attention to the special facilities which the above works afford for the successful and profitable manufacture of paper, viz.:—

1st. The unlimited and never-failing supply of fresh water, unrivalled for its softness and purity.

2nd. Abundant supply of material, also cheap coal.

3rd. Proximity to the metropolis, and ready markets.

4th. Connection with a railway, thus ensuring cheap and certain carriage for the raw material and manufactured article.

The present weekly capacity of the mill is 20 to 25 tons news printing, or 35 to 50 tons wrapping papers respectively; but taking into consideration the character and extent of the present works, the capacity of the mill could be enormously increased at a comparatively small cost, and a ready market found in Australia up to at least 200 tons weekly.

Owing to the length of time that the business has been established, the first costs of obtaining the market has been overcome. The mill also bears the highest reputation for its excellent quality of paper, and has obtained no less than FIVE HIGHEST AWARDS in competition against the World at the late great exhibitions, also testimonials from the leading journals in Sydney and Melbourne, and other first-class newspapers in Australia.

In 1882 the Proprietors, for business purposes, had the Land, Buildings, and Machinery inspected and valued by the following gentlemen, viz.:—

LAND (Hardie and Gorman)	£3,500 0 0
BUILDINGS (Mansfield Brothers) in detail, showing separate value of each building	18,268 12 9
MACHINERY (Norman Selfe) as per Schedule in detail, £24,621 1s 9d., but as a going concern	30,000 0 0

These valuations, together with the Exhibition Awards and other Testimonials, are now in the hands of the Auctioneers, where they can be inspected by intending buyers.

There will be no interruption to the business whatever; the Mill will be kept working as usual and prompt delivery given in full work.
